Pickets Fail To Show Up Here Saturday—Cables Cut At St. Louis

Telephone service in Sedalia Saturday went through without interruption by failure in appearance of pickets from the CWA-CIO who had been on the picket line at various times, off and on, here and elsewhere in Missouri cities.

Service Saturday was nearer to normalcy than at any time since the pickets first started their marches at the Sedalia exchange of Southwestern Bell Telephone company.

Cables Were Severed

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 18—(AP)—Over 400 telephones and teletypes were without service for several hours today after two Southwestern Bell Telephone Company cables were hacked, apparently with an axe.

Repairmen put both cables back into service.

This was the first cable-cutting in the St. Louis area. A cable of Southwestern Bell was hacked at Springfield, Mo., last week.

The cutting followed by several hours two instances of mass picketing here—the first since employes of the Western Electric company went on strike over a week ago.

No one was hurt as police dispersed the pickets around the long distance exchange and a Western Electric warehouse.

Union pickets disrupted telephone service at several spots in the five-state area served by Southwestern Bell. Western Electric and Southwestern Bell are affiliates of American Telephone and Telegraph company.

The pickets are members of Division 18 of the CIO Communications Workers. Southwestern Bell employes belong to Division 20 of the same union and have been observing picket lines set up by the Western Electric employes.

Three exchanges in St. Louis county were picketed today. Pickets also appeared in Missouri at Carrollton, Joplin, Webb City and Carthage. Several towns in Kansas, Oklahoma and Texas also had pickets.

Reward for Conviction

Frank Lonergan, vice president of Division 20, said he was certain the cable cutting was not the work of any union member. The company offered a $1,000 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the vandals.

Teletype service to Lambert-St. Louis airport, including Civil Aeronautics Administration circuits, was disrupted.

Ten operators on duty at Nevada walked off the job shortly after 3 p.m. when three CWA pickets appeared. When the pickets left about half an hour later the operators sought to return to work but were told by chief operator, Miss Jessie Bullock, they would not be needed for the rest of the shift.

H. W. Marrs, Joplin, who headed the pickets, termed the action a "lockout."

F. H. Alexander, business manager of the Joplin district of the Southwestern Bell company, said however, "We have a responsibility of knowing what kind of service we can furnish from day to day. We can't know when our employes just come and go, walk off the jobs whenever a picket line is thrown up."

He said the operators had been warned that if they left in the middle of a shift, they would be asked not to return until their next regular shift.

Investigate Residence Of State Senator-Elect

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 18—(AP)—Chief of Police Jeremiah O'Connell said tonight an investigation of the residence of State Senator-elect David A. Hess, a Democrat, will be made to determine if he lives in the second district.

Hess defeated Republican incumbent Milton F. Napier for the post from the second state senatorial district Nov. 7.

"There will be an investigation although we have no direct complaint," O'Connell said.

Friends of Napier complained to O'Connell because the address Hess used in filing for election was the home of Cpl. E. F. Druther, of the police department. It is in the second district.

Napier's friends claimed Hess lived outside the second district.

• Thought for Today

The way of peace they know not; and there is no judgment in their goings: they have made them crooked paths: whosoever goeth therein shall not know peace.—Isaiah 59:8.

The very thing that men think they have got the most of, they have got the least of; and that is judgment.

Arrest Bataan 'Death Marcher'

NORTH LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Nov. 18—(AP)—Police Chief Jack Pyle said today a man accused of being a "badly wanted" forger, who was arrested here yesterday, is being held pending a check with Fort Smith police.

Pyle said a felony warrant has been issued for Freddie Eugene Teaff, 27, of Sand Springs, Okla., at Houston, Tex.

Pyle said he believes Teaff may be wanted also at Fort Smith.

Teaff is a former orderly for Gen. Jonathon Wainwright and was on the bloody "death march" through Bataan. Identification papers found in Teaff's wallet also revealed that he was honorably discharged from the army, re-enlisted, and then discharged for writing "hot" checks, Pyle said.

A check of fingerprints in Washington verified Teaff's identity, the police chief said.

The Houston charges are thought to be in connection with Teaff's automobile, allegedly purchased two weeks ago in Houston. A motor company there claimed that Teaff paid for the car with a bad check for $1,750.70.

O. K. Armstrong Speaks At A New York Meeting

NEW YORK, Nov. 18—(AP)—Republican congressman-elect O. K. Armstrong of Springfield, Mo., said tonight the late President Roosevelt allowed Russia to absorb the Baltic nations because Stalin threatened to make separate peace with Hitler during the Tehran conference.

Armstrong, in an address at a Latvian Independence Day Celebration here, said he got this information unofficially from a State Department official who attended the conference of Roosevelt, Stalin and Prime Minister Churchill of Britain.

Roosevelt Was Alarmed

"I was told that Stalin had laid down an ultimatum: He must have secret assurances that he could retain the Baltic states as an integral part of the Soviet Union, or he would make a separate peace with his former partner in crime, Adolf Hitler," Armstrong said.

"Alarmed at this, the President had agreed that the U. S., at least, would do nothing to interfere with the Kremlin plans for the Baltic lands and peoples," Armstrong continued.

(The Baltic lands are Latvia, Lithuania and Estonia).

"Stalin did grant as a concession that the Cominform would be dissolved, and the Communist party in the U. S. cease as an active revolutionary force,—realizing, of course, that after the war the false guise of collaboration with the U. S. and other peaceful nations could be laid aside—as indeed it was."

Promising to fight in congress for the restoration of freedom for the Baltic states, Armstrong advocated American encouragement for "the formation and expansion of underground movements in every land under Soviet domination, until by uprising and revolutions, the grip of tyranny can be broken, Communism overthrown, and free, Democratic governments established."

New Proposal Made On Vetoed City Ordinance

A public hearing on the controversial City Electric Ordinance No. 3918 was held last night in the council chamber of the city hall. This ordinance, which amends an old city electrical regulation passed in 1930 was introduced by councilman Earl H. Lashley, and was vetoed by Mayor Herb E. Studer in the last City Council meeting.

In a counter proposal, it was reported electrical representatives offered to rewrite the ordinance erasing Mayor Studer's prime objection to the vetoed legislation.

This concerns the legality of a home-owner or taxpayer making electrical repairs in his home. The new proposal will make such repairs completely legal.

Walter A. Smethers, councilman from the Second ward and chairman of the Council's Printing and Ordinance committee presided over the hearing.

Boston Cream Pies Cause 300 To Be Ill

OMAHA, Nov. 18—(AP)—Cherry-garnished Boston cream pies was blamed tonight for an epidemic of food poisoning that left at least 300 Omahans ill.

Dr. Edward D. Lyman, Omaha-Douglas county health director, said that every case of illness reported to authorities involved someone who had eaten the pie.

He estimated that at laest 300 persons—"probably many more"—had been affected.

He said he had ordered a bakery to recall all the pies of that description distributed to food establishments.

Three technicians at the University of Nebraska college of medicine volunteered to eat some of the pie as an experiment.

Two reported this afternoon that they were ill, Dr. Lyman said, and "tonight they were too sick to come to the telephone to make and further reports."

The doctor said he hadn't heard from the third since the man had reported he felt as though he might be getting sick.

Additional laboratory tests were being made on the pies.

Reds Resistance In North Korea Wanes Near To Manchuria

Snow And Ice Block May Place Supplies Delivery To Up To Air Drops

SEOUL, Sunday, Nov. 19—(AP)—U. S. infantry today pushed into Kapsan, 21 miles from the Manchurian frontier.

AP correspondent Tom Stone, moving with the U. S. Seventh division in sub-zero weather, said troops of the 17th regiment entered the town at 10 a. m. (8 p. m. EST Saturday).

He said the Americans ran into only light resistance in covering the last two miles to the town that had been levelled by air attacks. When the 17th's final push started this morning there had been reports that Korean Red defenders were dug in just south of Kapsan.

SEOUL, Korea, Sunday, Nov. 19—(AP)—A tank-led column of U. S. infantrymen advanced four miles through a snowstorm Saturday to within 23 miles of the Manchurian border in northeast Korea.

Red resistance was minor, but snow and ice blocked the Americans' main supply route far to the rear, raising the likelihood that they would have to depend on air drops.

In the northwest, 100,000 Chinese and Korean Communists were reported digging in on a 60-mile front below the great hydroelectric plants on the Yalu river border between Korea and Manchuria.

These preoccupied Reds offered only light resistance to patrols ranging eight miles or more north of Allied lines.

The northeastern advance was made by the 17th regiment of the U. S. Seventh Division. It pulnged through three inches of fresh snow to a point two miles south of Kapsan. That smouldering town is 21 miles south of the Manchurian border.

Entry to Kapsan Today

An American officer at the front said the lead column was expected to enter Kapsan Sunday.

American bombers had virtualiy leveled the town. The Reds there had fled northward.

Only scattered rifle fire was reported by leading elements of the 17th regiment in Saturday's advance. The column smashed an attempted Red trap Friday and left 128 dead Communists at the site.

Associated Press Correspondent Tom Stone reported from that front that the Reds who escaped tried to block the American advance by blasting boulders down onto the road with dynamite.

The tanks merely turned off the road into snow-covered fields and rumbled around the obstacles.

The temperature dropped from 35 degrees amove zero in the afternoon to zero by dusk Saturday. GI's built fires and dug foxholes in the snow.

Maj. Gen. David G. Barr, commander of the Seventh Division, came up to the front from division headquarters at Pukchong.

Blow Up Bridges

"We're coming along real well," Barr told Stone. "Some of the wooden bridges up the road have been blown out and they've found a number of mines, but we'll move ahead as fast as we can.

"Just how fast we go depends a lot upon the weather, the condition of roads and bridges, and the opposition."

The weather, however, was a major factor.

Intelligence reports indicated Red strategy appearently was to pull back from the northeast front and form a line in the northwest between the Yalu river power plants and the Allies' expanding Changchon river bridgehead.

Interligence sources at U. S. Eighth Army headquarters estimated 28,000 Chinese Reds and 70,000 North Korean Communists were forming that line, from Taechon, 45 miles south of the Yalu river, to a point about 60 miles east of Taechon.

Closer Quiz On Narcotics Developed

Link With "Mafia" Figures Adduced In Testimony

By JAMES R. BACON

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 18—(AP)—Senator Estes Kefauver (D-Tenn.) said today his senate crime committee is "extremely interested" in learning more about a convention of "narcotics and mafia figures" called in Tijuana, Mexico, about the time of the Kansas City Binaggio-Gargotta slayings.

The lanky Tennesseans made that observation after a brief questioning of Frank Bompensiero, a San Diego cafe owner as the committee wound up a three-day stand here.

Bompensiero said he made on the average of two or three trips a week last spring to Caesar's restaurant in Tijuana, about 10 miles from San Diego.

There he said he dined and wined with such well-known narcotics figures as: Francisco (Three-Fingered) Cappola, Kansas City; Sylvester Carolla, New Orleans; Anthony Lopiparo, St. Louis; Tony Lacoco, Kansas City; Sebastiano Gallo, San Diego. Kefauver said there were others there including Giacomo Bartolini and Carlo Sciotarno, whose home towns were not given.

Kefauver said all are reputed leaders of the Mafia, the secret Sicilian crime society. Kefauver added that all have either been deported from, or denied admission to, the United States because of narcotics convictions or links.

Met Before Slayings

This group of "narcotics expellees from all over the country" gathered in the border gambling and bullfighting city, Kefauver said, shortly before the April 5, 1950, slayings of Charles Binaggio, Kansas City northside Democratic boss, and his strongarm man, Charles Gargotta, an ex-convict and known as a merciless enforcer of Binaggio's political decisions.

The two were slain in Binaggio's political club rooms.

"We are extremely interested in why these Mafai and narcotics figures concentrated in Tijuana at this particular time," Kefauver said, but declined to elaborate. "We will let the facts speak for themselves."

A Kansas City federal grand jury reported that both Gargotta and Binaggio were about to be indicted for gambling operations that totaled $34,500,000 a year. The jurors said that both had broken the code of the underworld and revealed who their partners were in the vast racing wire and other gambling enterprises.

Bompensiero told the crime probers that he once was a Milwaukee laborer but came to San Diego many years ago for fishing. He said that while there he became involved in gambling and other illegal enterprises. He said his partners in the Gold Rail Cafe in San Diego are Frank and Louie Dragna, son and nephew respectively of Jack Dragna. Bompensiero told the senators he was a long-time friend of Jack Dragna, reputed west coast Mafai leader and underworld rival of gambler Micken Cohen.

A recommendation to remove the gag rule which presents federal income tax agents from reporting crime violations to local authorities was head today by the committee.

The committee, after trying without much luck to pry income information out of gambler Mickey Cohen, questioned Donald O. Bircher, a retired intelligence unit man of the Bureau of Internal Revenue who made tax investigations of several underworld figures.

After testifying at the closed session, Bircher told reporters that before retiring as a group chief of the intelligence unit last Aug. 31, he had investigated, among others, Bugsy Siegel, a gangleader slain in Beverly Hills, and Tony Cornero Stalla, former operator of gambling ships off Southern California.

Mass Killer Faces Charges

Is Accused Of Murder In The Slaying Of Five

VINELAND, N. J., Nov. 18—(AP)—A mild-looking stocky little man who slaughtered five of his wife's relatives and wounded four other persons in a wild shooting spree last night was jailed on murder charges today.

"I ain't saying nothin.' I don't want to enter no plea," muttered five foot seven Ernest Ingenito this morning when he was taken before a judge.

That was 10 hours after the 25-year old appliance salesman and ex-GI stalked into his wife's house, a gun in each hand. He demanded to see his children.

"He wasn't allowed in," his wife said from a hospital bed today. "He seemed crazy. He said: 'You don't want me to see the kids. Here's what you're going to get."

Then Ingenito opened fire.

When the shooting spree stopped 20 minutes later, about 9:20 p. m., five members of his wife's family had been slain, three others wounded critically. Ingenito's wife, Teresa, 23, from whom he was separated, was wounded less seriously.

He had pursued his mother-in-law to a closet where she was hiding, yanked open the door and riddled her with bullets. He had shot down her uncle who was pursuing him with a knife. He had critically wounded a nine-year-old niece.

Ingenito fled after the last killing and became the object of the greatest manhunt South Jersey has seen in many years.

Surrenders Quietly

State policemen armed with sub-machineguns caught him in his car and he surrendered meekly, saying:

"I'm the man you're looking for."

He had made a half-hearted attempt at suicide, cutting his left wrist several times with a razor. But his injuries were not serious.

It was the second mass slaughter in South Jersey in little more than a year. On Sept. 6, 1949, another ex-GI, Howard Unruh, stalked River Road in Camden dealing death to 13 persons, some of them unknown to him, in the worst street slaughter in history.

Ingenito, blue-eyed, brown-haired and weighing about 170 pounds, was a salesman. His relatives, and his wife's were truck farmers.

It took police half a day to reconstruct the chronology of the killings. Here is how they pieced last night's murder tour together:

About 9 p. m., Ingenito rapped on the door of the smallish white clapboard, home of his father-in-law, Frank Mazzoli, 51.

Mrs. Ingenito opened the door, told her husband he couldn't come in.

"I was in the dining room walking away," she said, "when he started to shoot. My children (Ernest, Jr., two, and Michael, three) were upstairs."

Twice, she said, Ingenito asked her if she loved him.

"I couldn't answer him," she said.

Then her father, Mazzoli, tried to grab the shouting Ingenito.

"He killed my father," Teresa said from her hospital bed. "My mother ran across the street. He ran across the street and shot all of them there."

"There" was the home of Armando Pioppi, 82, his wife's grandfather.

Music Modes

The "King of Vibes" Lionel Hampton and his big band bounced, rocked and screeched the heck out of things last Sunday night at a dance in the Main Arena of the Kansas City Municipal auditorium. The show lasted four hours and in that time there were less than two dozen couples dancing at one time and the place was well filled.

The vibe king, again and again proved his ability as a versatile showman. The 22-piece aggregation includes seven sax (three baritones and a pair of tenors and altos, five trumpets, three trombones, bass, drums, guitar, piano and Hamp himself, not to mention a collection of vocalists.

At one point in the dance, when the band was playing the Hamp favorite, "Flying Home" all of the sidemen picked up their instruments and marched around the stage. Then, just as the number was nearing its climax, Hamp leaps flat footed to the top of a large tom-tom and brings the piece to a full voiced finale. Aside from that and the fact that the 36-year-old can juggle drum sticks as well as he can play on the skins the vibe solos were outstanding.

It is always a pleasure to hear someone who plays well and still gets a never ending thrill from what he is doing. Hamp is one these few. With a big toothly smile he started playing "September in the Rain" and then snapped off some very intricate chord progression. "Ah Ha," he screams, and the crowd screams right back "Ah Ha" . . . From there on out it was all on the upbeat and Hamp riding him with da de . . . da de da da daa dee dum dum.

A young tenor sax man by the name of Gil Bernard played some very convincing solos. Milton Buckner, well know pianist filled out the combo selections with Hammond organ. With Buckner's style and approach to jazz, it won't be too long before the Hammond will find its place in the more modern idiom.

Above the pitch, out of tune, and off the hinges

Three slightly deaf musicians (they played next to Maynard Ferguson in Kenton's new band) were motoring through England on their way to London, where they were scheduled to play a concert at Town Hall. The car they were riding in was rather noisy and hearing was difficult.

As they neared the city one asked "Is this Wembly?"

"No," replied the second, "this is Thursday."

"So am I," put in the third. "Let's stop and have one."

Vachel Lindsay, the late poet, was writing about the Mumbo Jumbo before his death in 1931: From the Congo (a study of the Negro Race)

"And the twelve Apostles, from their thrones on high,
Thrill all the forest with their heavenly cry:
"Mumbo-Jumbo will die in the jungle; etc. etc. . .

Little did Mr. Lindsay realize that the musicians of 1950 would twist the words Mumbo Jumbo into a Latin rhythmed tune and sweep the hit parades all over North America.

Red Cross Corner

Last Tuesday, at the Chapter House in Kansas City, representatives from our chapter attended the quarterly Home Service meeting. These regional sessions are for American Red Cross chapters in Missouri and Kansas. Mrs. Eula R. Spencer, Executive Secretary, Mrs. Fredonia Kingsbury and Mrs. Louise Weller were joined in Warrensburg by Mrs. Laura J. Chaney, Executive Secretary of the Johnson County Chapter. Special discussions were on Insurance, Dependency Allotments, Casualty Reports and Veterans Claims. The Red Cross Field Director from the Veterans Administration Regional Office in Kansas City led the afternoon discussions.

Under the general supervision of Miss Margaret Egan, Junior Red Cross Chairman, the Juniors have been doing some rather special things in the way of production. Thirty-six articles for men in the army hospital at Ft. Leonard Wood have recently been finished: Tray covers, tray favors and nut cups, all in keeping with Thanksgiving. This work has been well done, and we have been assured again and again, that these these small items give much pleasure to their recipients. They make sick trays bright and pleasant, and they are sure to carry with them some of the enthusiasm put into them by the boys and girls who fashioned them. . . . ATTENTION TEACHERS: Miss Egan is urging all of you to get in your Junior Red Cross reports of enrollment as soon as possible, in order that the schools may receive their publications. The gift boxes which are being filled by the school children and which will be sent overseas, should be in the Red Cross office by December 1.

The Chapter's quota of Christmas packages for men on the high seas were shipped Monday to San Francisco. It is fun to wrap them and we hope that it will be fun to receive them.

Yugoslavs Sell Bees

BELGRFADE — (AP) — There's money in honey these days. And Yugoslavia is capitalizing on it for its export trade. High up in Mountainous Slovenia, near the towering peaks of Triglav, Yugoslavia developed — even before World War II—a bee famed for its production.

Before the war, most of the output was kept at home. N ow the bees themselves are being sold amroad to sweeten up Yugoslavia's belt-tightening budget. The bee-boys — those who tend the hives and collect the honey with scarcely a sting—have formed a cooperative with soce 7,500 members.

First Real Test In Combat In Arctic Combat

That Is As To The American Troops In North Korea

By Clarke Beach

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18—(AP)—Four years of arctic warfare tests may spell the difference between success and grim suffering—or even disaster—for American troops in Korea this winter.

Since 1946 the army and the air force have been experimenting with equipment and fighting techniques needed for battle in the deep cold.

Early this year the results were field tested in the Yukon, far north in Alaska, in the first large-scale sub arctic maneuvers.

This week, as icy blasts from Siberia swept down on American GI's and their allies in Korea, the army's arctic warfare preparations got their first test in actual combat.

It is still too early to judge the results of this test. But the army is confident that its pre-Korea experimentation proved Americans from temperate climates can fight and keep healthy in terrific cold—if properly equipped. They can keep warm in newly designed tents, quilted and insulated with fibre glass.

And they have learned that in proper arctic gear, men can live in the open for long periods without freezing if cold-weather discipline is maintained.

That means mufflers tucked tight around ears and nose.

Also, a man must never perspire. Dampness is the great danger. Damp socks mean frozen feet. In Alaska, troops out in the open keep an extra pair of dry socks with them at all times.

The army has already sent vehicle winterizing kits to Korea, including heaters to warm up frozen engines and special non-freeze oils.

Another winter-beater is alcohol mixed with gasoline to give it more pep when water condenses in the gas tank. No water is used in the radiator—only a non-freezing liquid.

But there are still problems.

The small track-type carriers known as "weasels" are not yet satisfactory. They are not heavy enough to plow through heavy brush, and at times more than half of them were mechanical failures during the 1950 Yukon maneuvers.

A substitute for the "weasel" is being designed, but is not yet in production.

Another problem is that in deep cold, the rubber insulation around land communication lines freezes and chips off, continually interrupting messages.

Arctic Garb Heavy

And arctic clothing is still too bulky and heavy. Experiments with light-weight clothing, such as nylon pile, have failed to turn up an improvement over wool.

Frontline reports this week indicated that the onslaught of winter in North Korea caught the army supply organization off balance. Associated Pres war correspondents reported that many soldiers were bucking frigid wind, snow and near-zero temperatures in summer uniforms, warmed only by woolen underwear.

But the army said that even the most advanced troops, fighting far out in front of the main supply depots, would have full winter equipment by this weekend. President Truman said the troops are getting plenty of clothing.

They will need it. Vicious cold waves out of Siberia hit the mountainous region of northern Korea two or three times a month all winter, according to weather bureau experts.

The average temperature in North Korea in January is 20 degrees below zero fahrenheit. The record cold there is 43 below. Snow covers the mountains and hills for months.

Korea gets its weather by winds from the north and northwest, from northern Siberia, which has the largest cold air mass in the world. The central part of Siberia, remote from bodies of water which keep temperatures moderate, is the world's ice box—far colder than the north or south pole.

The average winter temperature in northern Siberia is lower than 50 below zero. It once had the coldest natural temperature ever recorded on earth—94 below zero.

Two features of the North Korean winter weather will present the army with problems it hasn't met in Alaska.

One is the Korean wind. It blew at 40 miles an hour last week.

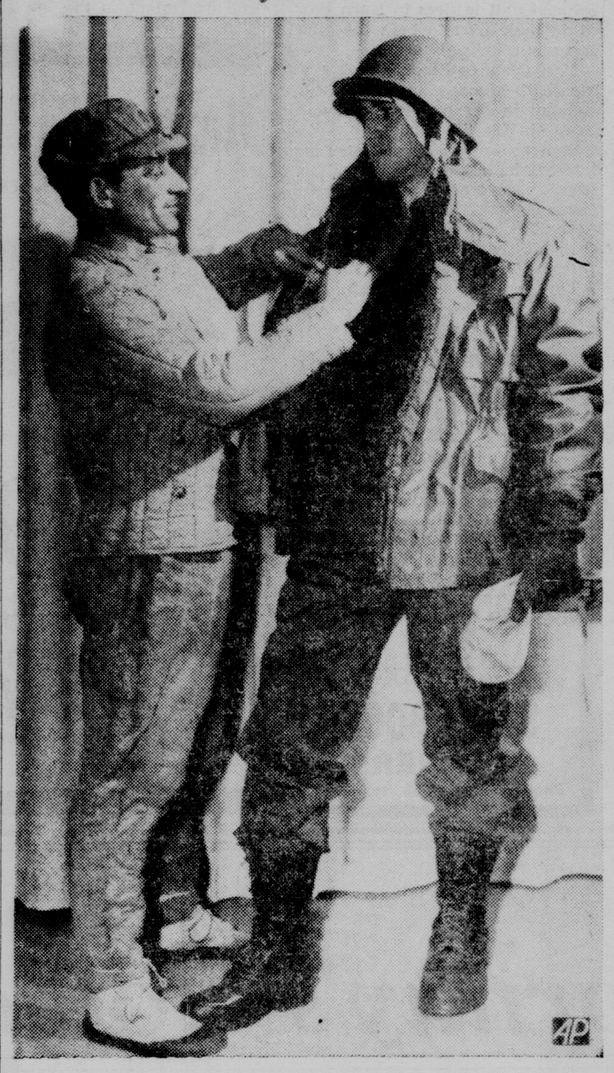
In Alaska, near Fairbanks, the army and air forces test troops experienced cold as low as 62 below zero. This correspondent in 1948 visited soldiers camping there in the tundra at that temperature. But there was no wind. Commanding officers said they doubted that human beings could live in the open in that region if there were any strong wind.

Korean temperatures never get that low, but the effect of both wind and 40-below zero is as devastating as far lower temperatures is still air. Extensive army tests of wind effects in the turbulent Aleutians have proved that.

Another new factor will be the changeableness of the weather. In central Alaska, full arctic clothing can be issued early in the winter and worn all season, because constant below zero temperatures can be expected.

But between Korea's cold waves there are sunny, relatively temperate periods. Troops will be encumbered and overheated if they continue to wear arctic clothing at those times. But they'll have to keep it nearby, for the cold waves sweep in suddenly.

Models at Army's 'Fashion Show'



George J. Schneider, civilian employe of the Quartermaster Corps, models the "wet-cold" uniform now being supplied to U. N. troops fighting in Korea's bitter winter weather. Sgt. Pierre Prejean of Henry, La., wearing a captured Chinese Communist soldier's uniform for contrast, counts the layiers of clothing worn by Schneider. The showing was at the Pentagon in Washington. The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Glen Chamberlain and will be held the 19th of December.

Are You a Property Owner in Sedalia?

How Does Ordinance No. 3918 Concern You!

Ordinance No. 3918 states that any person doing any type of electrical wiring either old or new work on your property must have a license and an established place of business. It also states that any doorbell, annunciator, or private telephone installed on your property must be installed by a licensed electrician.

Do you believe that if you are qualified to install your own doorbell in your own home you should be compelled by law to have this work done?

If you do let this ordinance pass as written there may be more ordinances of the same nature passed, making it unlawful to replace a board on your own back porch or to hang a room of wallpaper in your own home.

The Mayor of our city has vetoed this ordinance.

We believe it is your duty to prevail upon your councilman to rewrite this ordinance so that it will not deprive you of your individual property rights.

Start of Congress 150 Years Ago In 'Wilderness', D. C.

By Alexander R. George

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18—(AP)—Congress started doing business in "Wilderness City" that was Washington 150 years ago next Wednesday.

The seat of the 11-year-old government had just been moved from Philadelphia. An upcoming young fellow named Napoleon Bonaparte was first Consul of France, and the United States was negotiating warthreatening maritime disputes with him and the British.

On November 22, 1800, Senators and Representatives from the 16 states in the Union assembled to hear and address by President John Adams. It was the second session of the Sixth Congress. Previous meetings of Congress were held in New York and Philadelphia.

The still unfinished capitol building was bordered by forests and swamps. Many Congressmen grumbled at having to leave comfortable, fashionable Philadelphia for what one called "this miserable swampland."

Philadelphia (pop. 41,000) was the largest and wealthiest city in the United States. Pittsburgh was a log house settlement in "the far west." The vast Louisiana territory was owned by France, and California and Flordia were Spanish colonies.

In his address President Adams congratulated the people at the assembling of their Congress at the permanent seat of government. He praised the exploits of the infant Navy in mauling French privateers but expressed hope for amity with all European powers.

Jefferson President

Biggest business of the Congress was the choosing of a new president. Thomas Jefferson, then vice-president, and Aaron Burr of New York were tied for first place with 73 electoral votes each. President Adams had received 65 electoral votes, and Charles Pinckney of South Carolina 64 votes.

On the 36th ballot the House of Representatives selcted Jefferson as president and Burr as vice-president. They were members of the Republican party, which later became the Democratic party.

A hot political issue of the time was the imprisonment under the sedition law of some editors who supported Jefferson.

The sedition law made it a crime to publish any false, scandalous or malicious writings against the government, either House or Congress or the president.

Jefferson's followers in Congress attacked the law, which was due to expire in March 1801. They charged that it violated the first amendment, which prohibited Congress from passnig any law restricting freedom of speech or of the press. Nothing was ever done about the law, and it did expire in 1801.

The Sixth Congress was comprised of 32 Senators and 111 Representatives, compared with 96 Senators and 435 Representatives now.

Virginia had the largest delegation in the House, 19 members compared with 10 from New York.

Pay Was $8 a Day

Senators and Representatives received pay of $8 per day in attendance at sessions of Congress. They also received $8 for every 20 miles of official travel between their home districts and the capital.

The Speaker of the House and the presiding officer of the Senate received $16 per day on their jobs.

The salary of the president was $25,000 a year, with no deductions for days off of the job.

Living costs were low, and there was no income tax. Many members of Congress lived at boarding houses, usually two or three of them to a room, and there were few places in the primitive city of 3,000 to spend money.

Many members of Congress were Revolutionary war heroes. Others had either helped to formulate the federal constitution or the constitutions of their own seats.

George Washington died 11 months before the Sixth Congress convened in the city named after him. A proposed mausoleum for Washington in the capital building was the subject or prolonged debate in the House.

Henry "Lighthouse Harry" Lee, Representative from Virginia, was a leading proponent of the mausoleum. It was Lee, chosen by Congress to deliver the eulogy of Washington, who described him as "first in war, first in peace and first in the hearts of his countrymen."

Some members of the House opposed the mausoleum idea, saying that a simpler monument would be more fitting and less costly. Rep. Nathaniel Macon of North Carolina said "no pile of stones could express the country's gratitude to Washington, and it would be better to use $70,000 for education of the poor."

Other Congress ional business inculded secret sessions of the Senate on a commerce-protecting treaty with Napoleon, debate over the alleged tyranny of the governor of Mississippi territory and approval of construction of a shelter for firewood for Senate and House chambers.

Annual Turkey Dinner For Club

The Busy Stitchers home extension club met November 9 at the home of Mrs. Jimmie Pate with an all day meeting beginning at 10:00 o'clock. The business meeting was conducted by the president, Mrs. Truman Borton. New officers were elected for the coming year and names for Sunshine Pals were exchanged. Miss Helen Anderson was elected as the new president.

The annual turkey dinner for the club members and their families will be held at the home of Mrs. Willie Anderson and daughter, Miss Helen, on the 15th of December at 7:00 o'clock. There will be a Christmas tree and gifts for all those who are present.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. John Marteney in Sedalia. Roll call will be answered with a verse of Scripture containing the word "Thanks."

The afternoon was spent in quilting for Mrs. Atonie Pate. Two visitors were present: Mrs. Dewey Osborne, of Sedalia, and Ronnie Hammond, of Smithton.

The activities contained in the Girl Scout program are designed to help all Scouts carry out in their daily living the spirit of the Promise and the Laws. They are designed to help girls to be active citizens. The meeting of the Junior Planning Board held in the office Thursday proved that the group members are active citizens. Each girl told what her troop was doing or not doing and what they were planning. The next meeting of the group will be represented. A troop's program is planned according to the wishes of the girls, their needs, their abilities, and their opportunities for service and for relaxation.

The registration party will be December 16 at the Fox Theatre. Tickets will be given to every registered Girl Scout. Mrs. Freeberg would like to have all registrations in the office at once.

At the training course session for all leaders Wednesday ceremonies and badge work were discussed. Girls cannot carry on the Girl Scout program without the help of adults. Therefore it behooves all leaders to learn how to do their part to help the girls carry out their program.

Mrs. Olander Black is going to Marshall Monday to assist Mrs. Helman in organizing Girl Scout troops in Lincoln school.

Brownies and Intermediates interested in taking part in the pageant sponsored by Mrs. Peggy Homan meet at Perry's Music Store for practice on Saturday. Brownies will meet at 1 p. m. and Intermediates at 2 p. m.

Let us all be thankful on Thanksgiving Day that we live in a country where girls may have a feeling of security from seeing each girl have a chance to contribute her talent to the life and good of her troop, her family, her church, her community and her world.

Carolers To Appear On One Of Attractive Floats In Parade

One of the many floats which will appear in the big Christmas parade to be held in Sedalia on Friday afternoon, December 1, at 2:00 o'clock, is that of the carol singers.

The carols, which are a part of Christmas, were orginally songs accompanied by dancing, and so in tradition it is fitting that these songs of Christmas be sung by little dancers of the city. The pupils of the Harper School of Dancing of Sedalia, dressed in costumes of bright red with white trim, will ride on the Carol float and sing the songs of Christmas. The float will be pulled by two tiny white ponies that will prance along in step with the parade rhythm.

The Sedalia Jaycees, sponsors of the big parade, have received word that many local entries will be in the parade lineup. There will be floats from county schools, civic clubs and their auxiliaries, industries, retail business places, church and fraternal organizations and veterans organizations and their auxiliaries. Many others are expected to enter soon. Any organization wanting to sponsor a float may call the Sedalia Chamber of Commerce not later than Thursday, November 23, which will be the last date entries can be accepted.

Awards will be given for the best floats.

Youngsters are anxious for the big event and mothers and dads will be urged to get downtown early by the children who won't want to miss a thing.

Hold Up On Election Winners

Cook County Ill., Election Board In A Quandary

CHICAGO, Nov. 18—(AP)—A proclamation of all Cook county election winners, from U. S. Senator-elect Everett M. Dirksen on down, was ordered held up today by the Cook county election commission.

County Judge Edmund K. Jarecki said the commission will not proclaim the winners until the Illinois supreme court clarifies an election ruling it made yesterday.

Want Ruling Clarified

The commission telegraphed the high court justices, urging that they convene and clarify their ruling at the earliest possible date.

A proclamation in Cook county is needed before the successful state and Cook county election candidates can be inaugurated. County inauguration is set for Dec. 4.

Presumably, candidates who defeated incumbents would not be permitted to take office if the issue isn't settled in time. This could apply to Dirksen, Republican who defeated Senator Scott W. Lucas, Senate majority leader, by some 265,000 votes.

However, some political observers said appeals could be made to the federal courts, if necessary, on the senatorial and congressional races involved. The new Congress convenes in January.

First Assistant U. S. Attorney Lawrence J. Miller said the U. S. government was "vitally interested" in the election, particularly the phase involving the voting for U. S. Senator and 13 Cook county congressmen.

"If the present situation involves our intervening or investigating to protect our jurisdiction we will certainly do so," he said.

U. S. May Intervene

He said the government could intervene to expedite the proclamation of winners or file suit in federal court to compel proclamation of Senate and Congression winners before Congress meets again.

The Supreme Court decision, which Jarecki called contradictory, involved legal action started by Granville Beardsley, Republican candidate for Cook county judge. Beardsley lost to Jakecki by 27,000 votes on the unofficial count.

The high court, which got the case on a quick appeal, directed the Cook county election board to hold up the vote canvass and proclaimation until they examined the returns on 2,300 voting machines used in the election. It gave the parties until Jan. 2 to get their evidence in.

Later yesterday the high court amended its order, limiting it to the county judge race.

Jarecki, ex-officio head of the commission and chairman of the county canvassing board, contended one part of the Supreme Court's order banned issuance of a proclamation while another banned only that pertaining to the county judge.

"The board admits it's in a quandary," he said.

Strike Today On Television

NEW YORK, Nov. 18—(AP)—Television performers announced tonight a strike tomorrow against three of the nation's major television networks—but the networks said their T. V. screens would not be darkened by the walkout.

The strike, called because of a contract dispute, is aimed at the Columbia Broadcasting system, the American Broadcasting Company and the Dumont Television network. Also involved is the New York City T. V. station WOR.

The strike was announced by George Heller, national executive secretary of the AFL television authority.

He said performers would continue to work for the National Broadcasting Company, which still is negotiating with the performers' union.

Heller said the Television Authority represents 25,000 performers and that the strike would affect programs over the three networks originating from New York, Los Angeles and Chicago.

The three networks, however, immediately announced plans to continue broadcasting programs—but apparently without using Television Authority talent.

A CBS spokesman said that when the strike starts "we'll be programming" but that it had not yet been determined what type of programs would be offered the public.

A.B.C. said "the screens will not go dark on ABC-TV in event of a strike" and a Dumont spokesman said "we're going ahead, set to give our regular network services."

The Dumont spokesman did not elaborate on his statement.

Paid On Two Jobs By The Taxpayers

KANSAS CITY, Nov. 18—(AP)—Corporal Carl Wood is holding down two jobs more than 150 miles apart.

The corporal serves the army as a military policeman in Kansas City. He also became county clerk of Monroe county, Missouri, in the Nov. 7 election.

Although Wood, a Democrat, had no opposition and his election was certain, the Army inducted him into service Oct. 10.

He has been able to make the trip to Paris, Mo., occasionally to look after his job in the court house, but the regular clerk duties are being handled by a substitute.

Wood's term runs four years. He expects to get out of the Army when his 21-month hitch is up, and settle down to one job.

Insistent For Chinese Reds

NEW YORK, Nov. 18—(AP)—Russia's Andrei Y. Vishinsky declared today there can be no lasting world peace until the United Nations admits the Chinese Communists and adopts a long list of other Russian proposals.

Senator John Sparkman (D-Ala.) United States delegate, accused Russia of trying to bulldoze the United Nations and said the free world could not accept such a "bartering of peace."

He said Vishinsky had now made it clear that Russia would accept no program for world peace which did not comply entirely with Soviet demands. He said for the U. N. to bow to such demands would leave it incapable of acting except with Soviet permission.

The Soviet foreign minister, in a slashing one hour and 10 minute speech to the U. N. General Assembly, declared it would be futile even to try to negotiate a settlement of East-West disputes without the participation of the Chinese Reds.

He also laid down a series of preliminary conditions which he said must be accepted before Russia would even consider a 10-point, 20-year peace plan submitted by Secretary-General Trygve Lie.

These other points, embodied in a Soviet resolution now before the Assembly, are:

1. A pledge not to try to get around the veto.
2. Unconditional prohibition of the atomic bomb.
3. Armed forces under exclusive control of the Security Council.
4. Aid to backward countries under international control.
5. Development of international trade without discrimination.

More Money Than From Mint

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Nov. 18.—(AP)—Washington and Philadelphia notwithstanding, more money is made here than anywhere in the country.

Play money, that is—for kids.

Joe Grimland says his firm makes about 90 per cent of the toy money manufactured in the United States.

As to its appearance, Charles D. Fox, president of the firm, says "if you're drunk, you can hardly tell the difference."

Grimland Toys turns out billions of dollars worth a year—just how much nobody knows. The firm also manufactures play coins, cowboy spurs and a variety of wheel vehicles.

Fox says Germany and Japan "just aren't in it any more for making toys," even if there hadn't been a war. The United States is way in front.

Grimland, 28, native of Waco, Texas, got acquainted with Jacksonville during the war, when he was in the Navy. He says he thinks he's the first to start printing play money on a business-like scale, but anyway he got orders for scads of it so he must have been.

That started him off two years ago with himself and one other. Now the plant works 70 employes night and day. Their product goes all over the country, Pacific Island points and several European countries.

Grimland does most of the originating and promoting—Fox handles the business end.

In the only contest for county office in which the Republicans failed to mark up a majority in the unofficial count, J. W. Lawson, Republican incumbent for presiding judge of the county court, who was trailing his opponent by 20 votes, was elected when the absentee votes were tabulated. Official figures show J. W. Lawson (R) 2,281 and Porter Donley (D) 2271.

Forty-one singers were in the cast of the operatta "Chimes of Normandy," presented by the high school music department in the school auditorium last Monday night. Hal Boyle Reports from Korea

By Hal Boyle

YONGBYON, Korea —(AP)— American tankmen and Red horsemen divided control over this ancient walled city and fortress for more than three days.

It was one of the most unusual ordeals in the long history of Yongbyon, one of the fairest citadels in all Korea, to be held by one army during the day and another army during the night.

This odd battlefield situation ended Thursday morning as Lt. Col. William A. "Wild Bill" Harris of San Antonio, Tex., rode his Seventh Cavalry Regiment through the historic 500-year-old stone gate to take the city in force.

The victory march was a strange mixture of medieval and modern warfare—a symbol of the entire confused and chaotic Korean campaign.

There was no real resistance to the entry beyond the placing of wicked belts of road mines by the enemy along routes leading into Yongbyon. As the foe mysteriously withdraws north he is relying more and more on such defensive measures.

The first tank into Yongbyon was the "James Gang," a Sherman tank mounting a 76 mm. gun. Its commander — Sgt. 1/c Dwight James of Bluefield, Va.—was a little weary of going into the city in the morning and backing out again at evening.

"This makes the fourth trip in here for us," James said.

"We have been coming in every morning for three days and staying until it begins to get dark.

Horse Cavalry Moved In

"The civilians tell us that as soon as we pulled out two platoons of Chinese and North Koreans horse cavalry came into the city from the other side. They have been staying all night and pulling out themselves the next morning as we came back in. I don't know why they wouldn't let us stay in all night."

"Well, I don't think the gooks' horseback patrol will be back tonight," drawled another member of the tank crew. And the rest of the James gang laughed as they warmed their hands around a fire in front of their tanks.

They had just returned from a fire fight at a roadblock five miles northwest of the city on the road to Huichon.

"We figure we caught up to the Chinese Fourth Cavalry there," said Sgt. James. "They had made a charge on a bridge and pinned down our infantry with machine-gun fire for 15 minutes before we got our tank there. It took us another 45 minutes to clean them out. But there won't be any more midnight horsemen galloping around here."

This far north city was a scene of mingled leisure, busy activity and utter devastation.

Yongbyon itself is just another dirty Oriental city of medium size cupped in the hills northeast of Anju and some 60 miles from the Manchurian border.

It is important because of the number of antique shrines it holds, because of the six-mile long 20-foot high stone wall that has surrounded it since the year 1416 and because it is near Myohyang, the holiest mountain in Korea.

Militarily it is important now because it is the center of a minor but presently vital roadnet between the Eighth Army and its Chinese and North Korean foes.

To hold Yongbyon it is necessary to hold the hills that look down upon it. Infantrymen on foot and wheel moved through the battered street to seize those hills.

The heart of the city—where the roads meet—had been hammered into a lifeless rubble of broken homes and shattered business buildings. Veteran Associated Press photographer Max Desfor looked at the ruins and said "This is the hardest hit city I've seen in North Korea."

It was nearly empty of its usual population. A few white haired old women crawled about the debris searching for food. It is always the old women in any country—not the vigorous young family people—who cling in wartime to their homes longer, preferring death rather than to leave them.

Two American tank men were fixing a pot bellied stove in the middle of the street. Two of their buddies were lolling in stuffed chairs in the street drinking coffee. One had his combat boots on a desk by the building and said, "This is my outdoor office."

A group of hero worshipping Korean small boys hovered around them, shivering in the cold raw air as they waited to pick up scraps of food.

One tank man had a wad of old and worthless Japanese occupation currency. He was counting it grandly:

"One million — two million — three million—."

A Doughboy leaped down and grabbed up a clump of the useless money. Joyously he jumped back into his truck shouting to a buddy "Here's your month's pay."

As the infantry marched into the town they passed a temple centuries old. Beneath its arch stood a Russian-made enemy truck.

The Reds had not hesitated to use a Korean shrine to try to hide their war weapons. But the truck was bullet riddled — while the temple remained intact.

By Relman Morin
For Hal Boyle

TOKYO—(AP)—Korean Reds have opened a guerrilla "second front" far behind the main battle lines in Korea.

They are using tactics perfected over many years in Russia and China. U.S. Army intelligence officers say they are organized, have a central command and coordinate their raids with Red battlefront movements.

The Communist guerrillas are groups bypassed when United Nations forces broke out of the Pusan beachhead in southeast Korea and swept north in September and October.

Their main effort apparently is concentrated in a triangle formed by Chorwon, Ichon and Pyongyang in west-central Korea.

Intelligence officers said the guerrillas' chief objectives are to disrupt U.N. supply lines to the northern fronts and to obtain food, clothing and equipment for continued operation.

The guerrillas have five main targets — command posts, supply installations, artillery positions, main supply routes, and American officers of the Korean military advisory groups.

It is a war of stealthy movement with few fixed positions.

The United States 25th Division and the Turkish and Philippines brigades are in the main area of guerrilla operations. The GI's hit the Korean irregulars a severe blow Thursday, at Wacho when artillery blew up a command post. Fires apparently exploded ammunition stores cached in nearby houses.

The Reds then disappeared into the hills.

Fund of Experience

The Korean guerrillas probably had experience in operations against the Japanese during 50 years of occupation. And they can draw on a vast fund of experience accumulated by Chinese Communists in two decades of hit-run warfare against the Chinese Nationalists.

This can be supplemented by the experience accumulated by Russian guerrillas who operated behind the German lines in World War II.

The guerrillas' main weapon is surprise. They avoid combat with a superior force except when he is unprepared.

A textbook of the Chinese Communists puts it this way:

"When the enemy sleeps, strike. When he attacks, run away."

For the most part the Korean guerrillas try to get their weapons from the enemy.

They take clothing off bodies of their victims whenever possible. Consequently the Korean guerrillas frequently look like American-equipped South Korean troops when caught.

In the present "ghost war" the Reds have two great advantages:

The mountainous terrain, honeycombed with ravines and draws and full of caves, is hard to police. A large band can easily split up into very small groups and literally disappear.

Moreover, the North Koreans appear to be getting some supplies from the main fighting forces to the northwest AP correspondent Leif Erickson reported U.N. troops found an ammunition cache in one cave of 300,000 rounds of mortar and artillery shells. The Army seized 57 tons of food in a warehouse.

In cases where capture appears likely the guerrillas hide their weapons, change into civilian clothes and suddenly become ordinary "farmers." There are methods of detecting these changes. But for security reasons they cannot be disclosed.

So far, the guerrillas have succeeded in tying up a certain number of American and other U.N. troops. They have ambushed convoys on the supply routes. They are a threat American intelligence says, particularly as they shift the center of their efforts farther north toward the real battle front.

They have been trying to induct recruits and train new people.

How much success they have had is problematical, intelligence said.

In most instances, information about the whereabouts of the guerrillas and often about their plans for attack come from North Korean civilians.

Anti-guerrilla forces are being organized and trained by the U.N. so that the South Koreans themselves can deal with the problem

HOW A BUSINESS SPENDS THE MONEY IT GETS FROM YOU

ALMOST EVERY DAY of your life you pay money to business firms, large and small, for the things you need and want. But businesses, large and small, are simply groups of people. In the case of Standard Oil and its subsidiary companies, the money you pay for our products is spent for the benefit of people like these:

PART OF YOUR MONEY pays our 46,700 employees, one of whom is John Psikula of our Whiting, Indiana, refinery, shown here with his family. Last year our employees averaged $4,600 each in wages and benefits. The nation's growing demand for all kinds of petroleum products, in war and in peace, has been met with the help of their increasing output. Every Standard employee is backed by an average investment of $30,100 in tools and equipment, which increases his productivity and thus helps him earn a better living by producing more for you.

PART OF YOUR MONEY goes to the people whose investment in our company means better jobs for our employees and better products for you—the 96,800 owners of Standard Oil. One of them is Mrs. E. T. Conmy of Fargo, North Dakota. Our owners' investment has made possible the tools with which we make products that make your car run smoother, help railroads and airlines to serve you better, aid national defense. In 1949, our 56th consecutive year of dividend payments, owners were paid dividends having a value of $2.69 per share of stock. By increasing productivity through use of modern tools, our owners' investment also helps increase employees' earning power.

THE TAX COLLECTORS' share is part of every price you pay. State gasoline taxes in our territory average about 4 cents a gallon. The Federal tax is 1½ cents a gallon. Last year we paid in taxes 17.2 cents out of every dollar we took in, including our own taxes and the taxes collected by us from customers—but not including the many "hidden" taxes that we and you both pay. By comparison, employee wages and benefits took 16.4 cents, dividends to owners took 2.9 cents and 4.8 cents was used to improve our facilities for serving you. It takes thousands of profitable businesses like ours, as well as millions of individual taxpayers like you, to pay the cost of government.

PROBABLY YOU BUY our products from a dealer, like Jerry Lehr of Denver, Colorado. He is not a Standard Oil employee, but one of thousands of independent businessmen who sell our products. He depends on you for his living. The price at which he sells to you must include our price to him, his cost of doing business and a fair return for his services. It is the services he performs, and the quality products he sells, that make the Standard oval torch sign a dependable guide to motoring satisfaction and pleasure.

THE ONLY WAY we can stay in business is to give value received for the money that our customers, like you and Mrs. R. C. Batty of Denver, pay us. In 1949, materials, transportation and wear and tear, to make products for you, accounted for the remaining 58.7 cents out of every dollar we took in. And you don't buy just "products" from us. You buy power, freedom, convenience. Every penny you spend that way is well spent. Every penny we take in helps us provide better living for you and millions of other people.

Railroads Standardized Time Ending Confusion

By Frank H. Fuller

NORFOLK, Va., Nov. 18—(AP)—It was time somebody did something about time and 67 years ago today the railroads did it.

In early 1883 every town and city in the country kept its own time by the sun. There was no relation of one time zone to another. At one period it was estimated that there were more than 100 sun-time localities.

It was noon in Atlanta when the sun crossed the Meridian there—but it had been high noon in Jacksonville 13 minutes before and it wouldn't be noon in Birmingham until nine minutes later.

Time travels rapidly—more than 1,000 miles per hour. But there is a difference of 67 seconds between the eastern and western extremities of Chicago, and even a second or so between the ends of the Brooklyn bridge.

The confusion was absolute madness to railroad men. Their necks depended on fixing the time accurately. Going around a mountain curve two minutes too soon might be altogether too late.

The railroads first sought to correlate the movement of all trains in any specified area. If the master clock happened to be five minutes slower than its local sun time, all trains of the division were that slow together.

Adopt Zones System

The further west the rails ran the greater became the problem of synchronization, and the railroads sought further over-all standardization. In Chicago on October 11, 1883, the general time convention of railway managers (now the Association of American Railroads) adopted a system of time zones which with few changes is the same system in use today. It was put into effect all over their lines on November 18, 1883.

In one minute's time, in virtually all of the railroad stations in the land telegraph instruments, previously wired to an electrical connection with the observatory clock than in Alleghany, Pa., were switched in and the system of four standard time zones was in effect. In relatively short time localities adopted it and it became the universal way of fixing time.

The "railroad watch" and "railroad time" became fixed in the minds of the people as the n'th degree of accuracy.

The effort to perfect that accuracy has continued. Officials of the Seaboard Air Line Railroad here say all railroads have definite rules governing the inspection of watches owned by employes who have anything to do with train movements. The line no longer depends on the pride of each watch owner—it makes sure that his watch is a good one and that he keeps it that way.

Must Have Perfect Adjustment

The standard railroad watch cannot be smaller than a size 16 or larger than an 18, though the latter, biggest ever made for normal usage, is not manufactured any more in the United States. It has to have a glass crystal because a plastic crystal might be bent accidentally against the hands.

It has to be adjusted to five positions to keep perfect time. Perfect time to the Seaboard means not varying more than five and a half seconds every 24 hours within a temperature range from 98 degrees, body heat, to 32 degrees, freezing.

The railroad watch must have 21 jewels and be lever set. The reason for this is that in winding a stem-set watch the hands could be tripped and accidentally set. In a lever set watch, the bezel holding the crystall must be removed and the lever pulled out from under the dial before the hands can be moved.

The railroad watch also must be adjusted to insure even pressure from the hairspring at high and low winding, and it must have a micrometer regulator. Furthermore, it must have a sort of steel that will not magnetize the hairspring, and it must be so immune from temperature changes that expansion or contraction will not affect the balance wheel.

But the Seaboard, and most other railroads as well, aren't satisfied with all of this. Besides the constant daily comparisons of watches all along the line, the noon time check and hourly corrections each day from the naval observatory in Washington. Employes must have their watches inspected annually by a certified jewler and compared monthly to note and record variations.

Even the man who works far out from cities where approved time inspectors are located is not forgotten. Special traveling watch inspectors periodically move over the lines to section foremen, signalmen, towermen, levermen and construction gangs.

Out-Patient Treatment for S-A Veterans

Spanish American War veterans in this area have received from the Veterans Administration office in Washington a letter advising them of their right to out-patient medical treatment through the VA.

The VA regional office in Kansas City said today that many of these veterans, through a misunderstanding, are turning these letters over to the VA and to veterans' service organizations. It was pointed out that this letter should be held by the veteran until he needs medical attention at which time the letter, along with an application, may be submitted to the VA office.

Law is Passed

The VA explained that the 81st Congress passed legislation authorizing out-patient medical care for all Spanish American war veterans. Prior to this time, only those veterans with service connected conditions were eligible for such service. This new legislation also makes available to Spanish American war veterans those medical aids and prosthetic appliances for which they may have need.

The VA explained that all records of Spanish American war veterans are kept in Washington and that this letter from the VA central office in Washington is authority in itself for out-patient care through the veterans' nearest VA regional office. For that reason there is now no need for veterans to establish prior eligibility for such medical care as presentation of this letter to the VA at the time medical attention is desired is all the authority that is needed.

Style Guide for today's woman

By Frances Sagaloff at Sage's

Thursday is Thanksgiving, and no doubt you will either be entertaining at home or going to a family gathering at someone else's home. It being the first real holiday of the winter season, you must look your best. If you decide to be casually dressed you'll find a good selection of gabardine dresses that can be dressed up with costume jewelry or gay scarfs.

If the big dinner is to be early evening then choose one of the new crepes. They are cut on simple lines, with a newness you will like. Many of the black, brown and navy dresses have the tiniest bit of pastel trim. Also you will see lots of large smart button trims, or perhaps a beautiful pin on a side drape or at the neck.

Set aside some extra time to get dressed on a holiday. Casually apply your make-up and the arranging of your hair. You will arrive relaxed, and others will enjoy your company to say nothing of your added pleasure, because you are confident of your appearance.

For the centerpiece on Turkey Day, scoop out a big, round pumpkin and fill with small gifts, each having an orange or yellow ribbon attached, long enough to reach each plate or place card. After the little packages are in the pumpkin; fill the upper part with autumn fruits; maybe you'll just have room for several bunches of grapes over the top.

The gifts need not be something of great value; although one surprised guest received her engagement ring in this fashion. A favorite candy bar, a pocket comb, or maybe a tube of tooth paste that Mary keeps forgetting to buy on her lunch hour, are a few suggestions.

Anticipating what was on the end of the yellow ribbon in the pumpkin on Thanksgiving Day at Uncle Doc's house is one of my treasured childhood memories and I'm sure your "Hopalong Cassidy crowd" would love it too.

Yours for a happy Thanksgiving.

Smith-Cotton Ends Season With 15-14 Loss To Hornets

Hornets Overcome 14-Point S-C Lead With Closing Rally

The Smith-Cotton Tigers blew a 14-point half-time margin Friday night against a dead-game North Kansas City Hornet ball club to wind-up on the short end of a 15-14 score.

The locals started out like a house afire, climaxing a 67-yard scoring drive in the first quarter with a 10-yard aerial from Warren Keenes to Bob Shawver, who made a spectacular catch in the end zone for the Tiger touchdown. Art Conley smashed off tackle for the extra point to make the score 7-0.

Keenes-Shawver Click Again

The Smith-Cotton defense stiffened in the second period and the Hornets were held cold. With four minutes gone, the Bengals gained possession of the pigskin and went 86 yards in eight plays for their second TD. The pay-off punch was the Keenes to Shawver overhead good for 47 yards. Shawver took the toss on the NKC 35 and outran the opposing secondary with a fancy bit of broken field running. Warren Keenes added the point after touchdown from placee ment with Bill Arnold holding.

The Hornets threatened in the second frame when they drove to the Tiger 35. Watson Kidd, NKC's big gun, then threw a long pass down to the Tiger goal, intended for Edwards, but Bill McCrary went high into the air to pull it down on the Tiger four and stop the Northtown march.

Second Half a New Story

The fatal second half proved to be an entirely different story with the big Hornet line snuffing out every Tiger drive. Northtown kicked to the Tigers and stopped the Bengals without a first down, forcing Shawver to punt to the NKC 47. The Hornets, operating out of a "T", ran through and around the Tigers to the Sedalia 12 where Watson Kidd fumbled and Wheeler recovered for the Bengals. S-C, shifting to a single wing, returned the favor on the initial play as Schulz, the Tiger center, passed the ball past tailback Floyd Burton into the Sedalia end zone, where Burton fell on the ball, giving a two-point safety to the Hornets.

Late in the third period the Hornets tallied their first touchdown. After a S-C drive to the mid-field fizzled, Bob Shawver punted out of bounds on the NKC 33. It took 11 plays for the visitors to go over for the score. Watson Kidd ended the 67-yard scoring march as he plunged over from the one. Kidd's attempt for the extra point was wide.

Perry Scores Clincher

The clincher for the visitors was counted with four minutes gone in the final period. Taking a Tiger punt on their 43, North Kansas City needed but four plays to score. The pay-off came on a beautiful, weaving 46-yard run by quarterback Larry Perry, on a cross-buck to tie the score. Kidd added the all-important point after touchdown from placement with quarterback Perry holding. The snap from center was to Perry's right but he made a nice recovery for the placement.

Smith-Cotton fullback Art Conley was carried from the field in the waning minutes of the game with a painful back injury. He was taken to the Bothwell hospital, examined and returned to his home. The injury is not serious.

The game marked the end of the high school football careers for 11 of the Bengals. Coach Ralph Dow said that his boys played well, but they were somewhat tired at halftime and were definitely out-manned by the Hornets.

This contest gave the Tigers a season's record of six wins and two losses. Since 1946 the Bengals have won 35 and dropped eight tilts.

K-State Easy For Jayhawks; Missouri Next

MANHATTAN, Kas., Nov. 18—(AP)—The Kansas Jayhawks, led by a fleet corps of halfbacks, rolled up a big halftime lead then let its defensive platoons carry the ball in a 47-7 victory over the lame Kansas State Wildcats today.

It was Kansas' third victory in the Big Seven conference against two losses, and it was the ending of another victory-less league season for Kansas State.

The Jayhawks appeared to be looking ahead to their game with Missouri Thanksgiving Day instead of the work at hand during the first 12 minutes. Kansas State was out in front 7-0, by virtue of a touchdown on an 80-yard drive and a conversion.

Then came the works.

Wade Stinson, senior Jayhawk halfback who set two new Kansas team records, slashed over from the two-yard line and Fox Cashell kicked the point to tie the score 7-7 a couple of minutes before the first quarter ended.

Sacred Heart Opens At Home Tuesday Night

The Sacred Heart Gremlins open their 1950-51 basketball home season Tuesday night against Green Ridge high school.

The card for the evening will include a girls' volleyball match, and a B-team basketball game in addition to the main attraction.

Gremlin coach Palmer Nickols has but two returning varsity players; he lost five of his A squad men in last spring's graduation. In their opening two encounters of the current campaign the Gremlins have displayed continuous improvement, and promise to be a smoothly-functioning unit in the immediate future.

The present starting team is built around returning lettermen Jim Menefee and Bill Hodges, with Kenny Jett, Jim Labus and Jim Falls up from the 1949 B-team rounding out the five. Hodges is the pivot-man, Captain Menefee and Labus the forewards, and Fall and Jett the guards.

New bleachers have been erected in the Sacred Heart gymnasium which assure good vision for all spectators. The Tuesday schedule calls for the volleyball game to open proceedings at 7 o'clock. "Rocky" Carver and Dave Hales will call the games.

Banker Charged With Violation Of Game Laws

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 18—Joseph L. Werner, 51, prominent investment banker of suburban Ladue, today was charged in St. Charles County with violation of waterfowl hunting laws.

The information was issued by St. Charles county prosecuting attorney H. K. Stumberg on the complaint of federal game agent Bernholt Palas and Missouri Conservant Agent Kenneth Palas.

Also charged in the information is Arthur Mahon, 44, custodian of exclusive Webfoot Hunting Club near St. Peters.

The agents said they saw Werner and Mahon shooting and noticed 12 large mallard ducks swimming near their blinds.

Werner had one duck and one goose and Mahon had one goose in their possession, the agents said.

Mahon said the mallards were being used to train hunting dogs to retrieve birds and had escaped from their pens.

Both the defendants said they had not been shooting over the ducks since they were at the opposite end of the pond.

Werner said the incident was "merely a technical thing."

Preliminary hearings was scheduled for Tuesday.

Tulsa Takes Valley Crown

TULSA, Okla., Nov. 18—(AP)—Tulsa university's Golden Hurricane, blowing with its brilliance of old, outclassed Wichita, 48-0 to win the Missouri Valley Conference football championship today.

It was Tulsa's first conference crown since '47. Wichita's Wheatshockers, who have now lost four straight games, were making a bid for their initial title.

Football Roundup

By Will Grimsley

NEW YORK, Nov. 18—(AP)—For the second time in three Saturdays the nation's No. 1 college football team was toppled today as Illinois chopped down powerful Ohio State, 14-7, and moved within a step of the Rose Bowl.

On Nov. 4 top-ranking Southern Methodist was felled by Texas, which clinched the Southwest Conference championship and the Cotton Bowl bid this afternoon with a 21-7 triumph over Texas Christian.

It was a harrowing day for the gridiron mighties as the turbulent campaign roared toward its climax.

Army Has Scare

Army's 27-game unbeaten streak tottered in a driving rainstorm at Palo Alto, Calif., but the Black Knights of the Hudson stabbed for a desperate third period touchdown that beat Stanford, 7-0.

It was the first time this season the West Pointers were held to less than four touchdowns. They ruled a 20-point favorite over a team that had lost two games and been once tied.

At Berkeley, Rose Bowl bound California, unconquered in three seasons of regular season play, barely squeaked out a 13-7 victory over lightly regarded San Francisco, defeated by Stanford and Fordham.

7 Still Have Clean Slates

Thus the diminishing ranks of the country's unbeaten and untied major teams held firm at seven, with Oklahoma, Kentucky, Princeton, Army and California in the all-victorious parade. The other two unblemished teams—Wyoming and Loyola of Los Angeles—were idle.

The day's big game was at Champaign, Ill., where the Illini struck with two swift trick plays in the second period to whip the Ohio State Buckeyes, who just last week shot to the top of the Associated Press poll.

Illini Spring Surprise

A crowd of 71,119 saw Illinois check the Buckeyes' ball-moving powerhouse, Vic Janowicz, and prevail on touchdown thrusts, engineered by Fred Major, Don Stevens and hobbled Johnny Karras.

Now Illinois needs only to take the measure of thrice-whipped Northwestern to sail into the grandpappy of all bowls at Pasadena. Today's setback was Ohio State's first in the conference but the Buckeyes, who beat California in the Rose Bowl last year, are ineligible to return.

A defeat for Illinois in its final game would throw the bowl plum to Wisconsin, granting the Badgers can whip Minnesota in their last fray. Wisconsin lost its third game of the year today to the Ivy league's Pennsylvania, 20-0.

Texas Gains Bowl Bid

Texas qualified for the Cotton Bowl, where the southwest champ is perennial host, after Rice upset Texas A. and M., the only other contender, 21-13. The Aggies play Texas Nov. 30 but they're no longer in a position to be "spoilers."

Oklahoma's Sooners made a bid for the now wide open No. 1 berth by smashing Missouri, 41-7, at Norman. It was the Sooners' 29th win in a row, the longest string in modern football.

Oklahoma and Kentucky are now outstanding in the list of unplucked bowl eligibles.

Kentucky Has Breather

Kentucky smashed North Dakota, 83-0, at Lexington for its tenth straight triumph. Quarterback Vito Parilli, the Wildcats' aerial magician, set a new national college record by throwing five touchdown passes to run his season mark to 23.

The Wildcats close their campaign against rugged Tennessee next week in Knoxville, and a Sugar or Orange Bowl bid is reported hanging in the balance. Once-beaten Tennessee belted Mississippi, 35-0.

Princeton continued to cut a wide swath through the Ivy league by trouncing Yale, 47-12. It was the eighth in a row for Charley Caldwell's high-geared single wing specialists, who have only Dartmouth left on schedule. Princeton as an Ivy leaguer, is allergic to bowls.

Colorado Stops Oregon, 21-7

BOULDER, Colo., Nov. 18—(AP)—Two slashing touchdown drives in the second period, with fullback Merwin Hodel pounding across the goal, gave the Colorado Buffaloes a 21-7 victory today over an Oregon team that was dangerous only in the airlanes.

Colorado's offense clicked only in alternate quarters—in the second, when the Buffaloes marched 61 and 62 yards for touchdowns, and in the fourth, when a 38-yard pass from Dane Graves to Woody Shelton produced their final score.

Oregon tallied in the last minute of the first half on a 31-yard pass from Hal Dunham to Tommy Edwards, and almost did it again in the final 15 seconds of the game when an 84-yard pass play from Dunham to Edwards was stopped two yards short of the goal.

Sport Scraps

By D. Kelly Scruton

SMITH-COTTON high school Tigers ended their season with not too bad a record for the year, six victories against two losses. They didn't get to go to the Show-Me-Bowl and maybe being overlooked had a little effect on the boys against North Kansas City, Friday night when they lost 14-15. On the other hand North Kansas City had the weight, power and determination to beat te Tigers and they fought hard, the latter being more noticeable in the last half.

Speaking of the Show-Me-Bowl, I don't believe it proved anything when Columbia beat Higginsville (a set-up for the Kewpies) 40 to 7, Friday night. If Smith-Cotton had been picked the crowd would no doubt would have been better satisfied, whichever the result. Just say the Tigers would have lost (we don't think they would have) it would not have been a slaughter like it turned out to be. All of which proves our indication in last week's column.

Liberty beat Higginsville during the season, and Liberty doesn't have any power house, at least a team to compare with teams such as Columbia, Jefferson City, Sedalia or any of the CEMO clubs. But it is an example of what the Columbia Jaycees were shopping for when Higginsville was picked.

One thing we are certain of, Columbia finally got its name on the Show-Me-Bowl trophy where Smith-Cotton has theirs on it twice. Had the Tigers played in the bowl the Jaycees nodoubt would ave been out a trophy for 1951 and would have had to purchase another—'cause the Tigers would have had permanent possession of it.

THE Smith-Cotton players were a little disgusted over the fact they had been overlooked. But credit is due to the boys from Clay county, taking advantage of every break they did get and getting steamed up when the real break arrived, the safety they were given by the Tigers.

North Kansas City battled through with two touchdowns, missed the extra point on the first and made it the second time giving them 13 puoints but the safety made it possible to win 15-14

"Skippy" Schulz, center was responsible, but he cannot be blamed and should not be booted around for it. I can imagine how he felt, when he looked between his legs and saw that ball flying over the head of his backfield man and knowing it was going for a safety. Just a little anxious while down on his twelve yard line and wanting to make it good so his team could start the drive back down field. It is one of those things that happen—it happened and that's that.

"Skip" don't fell to bad about it. I recall back in the days of Gardner and Michaelis when Gardner was in the same spot. He was anxious to get going down the field and he made a beautiful spiral pass over Michaels head, it went sailing between the uprights and over the goal bar. You aren't the first center that had to be embarrased because of being over anxious—and you wont be the last.

MONDAY I understand, the opponent for the Monett high school team in the Marble Bowl game at Carthage will be named. I understand Smith-Cotton in spite of its loss Friday night is being considered as a possible contender. Coach Ralph "Stub" Dow is willing to take the team on any bowl trip providing the players themselves feel they want to go.

As much as I would like to see Smith-Cotton in a bowl contest, actually the Tigers record doesn't warrant them for any bowl where only unbeaten teams have been invited in the past. However, I do say they will be a credit to Smith-Cotton, and in whatever bowl they should be invited they will give the opponents a real battle and make it a good game for the fans to watch.

THE Missouri Pacific "Dynamos" basketball team sponsored by the Sedalia Missouri Pacific Booster club, is being revived after an absence of nearly 20 years. The first practice session of players desiring to make the squad was held at Liberty Park, Saturday afternoon. Eighteen former basketball players were present and went through the paces and will report back Wednesday night for another session.

Remember back when the team was first organized in the season of '29 and carried on through the early 30's only to disband and pass into history. The team made an outstanding record in those years along the Missouri Pacific system and playing some independent ball in this section of the state.

As the years passed nothing was thought of the sport by the Booster Club until some younger blood became employed at the shops. Young men who formerly played basketball at their nigh schools and even some college boys now working at the shops decided it would be nice to have a team and the effort to get it sponsored was made.

The past week a meeting with Palmer Nichols, Chief Boosten, and the Executive Board of the Club, resulted in the proposition being favorably acted upon.

Jack Lobaugh, who needs no introduction to basketball fans in Sedalia, employed at the shops was chosen to coach the team. Charlie Smith was named as assistant coach and George Ray as business manager for the team.

The activity also met with the approval of Ray Maxwell, publicity director for the Missouri Pacific Lines, who came to Sedalia the past week to discuss the Booster Club activities for the coming year.

Reynolds Shows Versatility In 20-13 Win Over I-State

LINCOLN, Neb., Nov. 18—(AP)—Rambling Bob Reynolds turned puncher and pin-pointing punter today in Nebraska's 20 to 13 victory over Iowa State.

The win was Nebraska's fourth in conference play against one defeat and leaves them with a title game coming up against Oklahoma, the defending champion next week.

Cyclones Fumble Early

A crowd of 36,000 saw Reynolds, with his excellent punting, start Nebraska on the way to victory in the first quarter. He put Iowa State in the hole with a kick that bounced out on the five. Nebraska, in recent years always a lucky team against Iowa State, promptly got another good break when Bill Weeks fumbled and Tony Winey recovered the ball for Nebraska on the six.

It took Nick Adluci just two plunges to score and Reynolds kicked the point for a 7 to 0 halftime lead.

The third period was the most action-full quarter, with both teams scoring.

Weeks Aerials Work

Iowa State started the fireworks as Weeks got his passing attack to working and Iowa State went 73 yards for the kickoff. Weeks threw four passes for 40 yards and finally whipped around the Nebraska left end for 19 yards to score the touchdown.

But when the wind carried Bob Clendening's kick wide, Iowa State was still behind 7 to 6.

From the following kickoff Nebraska put the game in the bag as Reynolds began punching consistent holes through the State line. From their 40, Nebraska went 60 yards, Reynolds gaining 35 of the yards with darting slashes into the line.

From the 4 yard line, with Iowa bunched expecting a Reynolds smash, Adduci skipped around end to score. Reynolds kicked the point and the score was 14 to 6.

Bobby Counts Clincher

Just to make it doubly sure Reynolds skipped over from the seven for Nebraska's third-touchdown in the fourth period.

NORMAN, Okla., Nov. 18—(AP)—Leon Heath, solid as a dollar and almost as hard to hold on to, led Oklahoma to a 41-7 triumph over Missouri today as the Sooners extended football's longest winning streak to 29 games and bid strongly for top national ranking.

Slowed by an injury in midseason, Heath returned to his old form before a crowd of 47,000 and ripped the Missouri line apart in a sparkling first-half performance that stamped him as a candidate for All-America honors.

Victors Wrap It Up Early

The Sooners scored twice in each of the first two periods, then turned the game over to the reserves who outplayed the visitors in the second half.

Heath rambled 22 yards for one touchdown and set up another with runs of 23 and 22 yards. Sophomore Billy Vessels tallied twice. Buddy Jones, Oklahoma's senior safety man, returned one punt 50 yards for a touchdown and set up Heath's counter with a 35-yard punt runback. Merrill Green and Jerry Ingram scored Oklahoma's second half touchdowns.

Klein Saves Shut-Out

Missouri, outclassed from the start, never threatened until the final quarter when Phil Klein connected on three straight passes, the last one going to Bob Henley for 11 yards and the lone Tiger touchdown.

It was the eighth victory of the current season for the powerful Sooners, who haven't been beaten or tied since their 1948 opener. It clinched a tie for the Big Seven conference title. Oklahoma plays Nebraska here next week for the championship.

It also gave Oklahoma a strong claim to top national honors. The Sooners entered the game ranked second to Ohio State in the AP national poll. Ohio State lost to Illinois today.

Arnold's String Ends

The only disappointment for the home forces came when quarterback Claude Arnold had one of his passes intercepted for the first time this year.

Arnold had entered the game with a string of 88 passes without an interception, all but four of them thrown this season. Had he kept five more flips from falling into enemy hands he would have cracked the one-year record of 88, held by Francis (Reds) Bagnell of Penn and the two-year mark of 92, held by Lynn Dorsett of Cornell.

His first aerial attempt went for 28 yards to John Reddell and took Oklahoma to the Missouri 23 in the second period. But on the next play, Harold Carter hauled down an Arnold pass intended for Jack Lockett in the end zone and the streak was ended.

The outcome never was in doubt. Starting on its 40 in the first period, Oklahoma drove to a touchdown in five plays. Heath's 23-yard and 22-yard runs featured the drive, capped by a four-yard scoring thrust by Vessels.

Missouri	0	0	0	7—7
Oklahoma	13	14	7	7—41

Missouri scoring touchdown, Henley; conversion, Glorioso.

Oklahoma scoring: Touchdowns, Vessels 2, Jones, Heath, Green, J. Ingram. Conversions, Weatherall 5.

Iowa Plays Irish To 14-14 Deadlock

IOWA CITY, Ia., Nov. 18—(AP)—Iowa and Notre Dame entertained a capacity crowd of 52,863 fans today with a vicious football duel that ended in a 14-all tie.

It was Notre Dame that had to roar back to get the deadlock. The Irish were struck by two first quarter Iowa touchdowns, then settled down to a long, uphill grind that finally squared the battle.

At the finish it was Iowa that appeared to be willing to settle for the tie. The Hawks let the clock run out with 10 seconds to go on a fourth down on the Notre Dame 45 yard line.

Army Edges By Stanford, 7-0

PALO ALTO, Calif., Nov. 18—(AP)—While his coaching father peered anxiously through the rain and gloom, Army quarterback Bob Blaik whipped an arrow-straight pass to team captain Dan Foldberg to give Army a hard-fought 7-0 victory over Stanford in their intersectional football game here today.

The scoring play, good for 28 yards, came late in the third period, and cracked the strain for some 40,000 fans soaked by a steady downpour. Foldberg, big left end from Dallas, Texas, and his true-throwing teammate, Blaik, thus maintaining Army's great record for the year, unbeaten and untied. The Cadets showed today they could operate under any conditions.

Their 28th consecutive victory on the country's gridirons was as hard-earned as any. The field was sloppy, whipped into mud in the center and soggy everywhere else. Army's best attack all season has been on the ground. Gains this way were almost negligible today.

From all early indications, the two teams seemed destined to play a scoreless tie. Stanford, beaten twice this season and tied once, came up with a stubborn defense and, at times, outcharged the Black Knights in offensive sorties.

But young Blaik called his shots in a fashion so masterful that his strict disciplinarian father, Earl "Red" Blaik, could find no fault. The quarterback turned to the air when the ground plays failed.

Jewell Edges By Central; Takes Title

FAYETTE, Mo., Nov. 18—(AP)—Ken Adams' accurate kicking toe brought William Jewell through a touchdown trading game with Central, 27 to 26, today and enabled the Cardinals to win the M. C. A. U. football title with an unbeaten record.

Jewell's place kicker converted on three of his team's four touchdowns while Rod Murtha of Central had two of his attempts blocked to the dismay of the homecoming crowd.

Central's Eagles scored in three of the four quarters but couldn't stop Jewell's Tom Cook, Melvin Gadt, Bill Neild and Tom Butler who ripped off sizeable gains almost at will.

Georgeff Stands Out

Central couldn't match William Jewell's ground power took to the air. Gil Georgeff, Central's Little All America candidate caught two of Bob Ellis' heaves for touchdowns. One was 18 yards in the first quarter and the second, just before halftime, was good for 52 yards. Georgeff closed his collegiate career with a record of 46 touchdowns in his four years at Central. He scored once on a 9-yard run today and tossed four successive passes to Mitch Cochran for Central's other score.

Gadt and Cook were just as good for the winning Cardinals. Cook ran 35 yards for a touchdown in the second period, sparked an 86 yard drive in the final period that ended with his 5-yard touchdown plunge. Gadt scored twice on short plunges in the first and third periods.

Statistics About Even

Jewell made 22 first downs for 263 yards on the ground and 79 through the air. Central had 14 first downs, 150 yards rushing and 203 from passes.

Time: 8:30 o'clock Tuesday night.
Referee: Jack Hader, Kansas City.

Ray Eckert, California, Mo., wrestler, who became a favorite and a villian to Sedalia fans divided on their support, returns to the Sedalia ring after an absence of more than two years. Eckert is scheduled to meet "The Great" Moto of Tokyo, Japan, and promises to administer a whipping to the man from the Pacific island of Japan.

Eckert in these years of absence from the midwest has appeared on both the east and west coasts in matches. On the West Coast circuit he ended a traveling period of several months and returns home with the heavyweight championship. His experience away has proved much and he should be very capable of doing away with the visiting Jap.

Eckert Requests Bout Here

Desiring to return to the midwest circuit for several weeks to be near his home, one of his first requests was to return to Sedalia and wrestle so the hometown fans of California could drop over and see him.

Moto isn't too sure about his match. Too much has been told him about Eckert, and he knows Eckert can get tough or he can wrestle straight wrestling. He knows too the reputation of the big Missourian from records in other circuits.

Jerry "Killer" Meeker comes back to meet Chico Gracia of Tucson, Ariz., in the semi-windup event on the card. Meeker is a likable fellow and although during his career he has fans mad at him, he has also returned to make them like him. Gracia and Meeker should provide 45 minutes of fast wrestling entertainment.

Savage Meets Two Men

Rather a novel idea in a match is the semi-team tag event in which Fritz Schnabel and "Bad Boy" Brown team up to beat Daniel Boone Savage the mountaineer from Boyd county Kentucky. Savage said he would like to even a score with both in one meeting and has agreed to beat them both "alone" in a 30-minute affair.

Jack Hader, Kansas City, will handle the officiating business of the three events this week.

Ozark Theme Of Music Club Program

From the "vittles" to the "fiddlin' and dancin' the program presented at the Helen G. Steele Music Club on Wednesday night, entitled "Moonlight in the Ozarks" proved to be unique in every way. Mrs. Frank F. Evans, Mrs. Edgar L. Knight and Mrs. George Miller were chairmen. Mrs. C. E. Messerly, Jr., and Mrs. C. W. Mathieson, social chairmen, had charge of the club dinner, which was served buffet style preceding the program. The dining table was gay with a red and white checked cloth, and held centerpieces of fall fruits and vegetables. Antique ironstone platters and vegetable dishes, loaned by Mrs. Messerly, were used in serving. The menu was especially planned to fit the occasion and included all the "country fixin's" such as sugar cured ham, home baked beans and pumpkin pie. A woodcut depicting square dancers made by Mrs. Miller, decorated the napkins and the covers of the programs.

Those who assisted in serving were Mrs. Henry Menefee, Mrs. J. A. Lamy, Mrs. Frank B. Long, Mrs. J. O. Latimer and Mrs. Knight.

Mrs. Evans, wearing her best "apern," a slat sunbonnet and a shawl, opened the program and led the members in singing rounds and other Ozark melodies, accompanied by Mrs. C. C. De Lozier. Mrs. Miller then read a clever poem on Ozark superstitions, written by Miss Catherine Riner. Miss Rose Marie Reed played "Seeing Nellie Home" as a violin solo, and the Mountain-aires, Mrs. James Jolly and Mrs. Keith Zahringer sang a duet, "Missouri Waltz." Mrs. Edgar L. Knight related amusing tales of the Ozark hill country. The program closed with two square dances expertly performed by Mr. and Mrs. Don Donath, Mr. and Mrs. Bob Long, Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Peoples and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Scott.

"Scenes of Childhood" will be the theme of the program next Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock, with Mrs. C. C. DeLozier, Mrs. Charles Patterson and Mrs. Henry Salveter as chairmen. Characteristic experiences and events of childhood will be illustrated by music, vocal and instrumental, the song titles providing the continuity. Two pairs of duo-pianists will be heard, as well as piano, vocal and violin solos and numbers by an octette.

Jehovah's Witnesses Are Denied Damages

ARDMORE, Okla., Nov. 18—(AP)—A federal court jury last night denied $228,000 damages sought by Jehovah's witnesses against 13 Duncan, Oklahoma citizens.

The jurors deliberated only 47 minutes to reach a verdict.

H. C. Covington of New York, attorney for the religious sect, gave notice of appeal after his motion for a directed verdict was overruled by U. S. Judge Edgar S. Vaught.

The suit was an outgrowth of a riot at Duncan July 17, 1949, while the sect was meeting at an auditorium.

The riot was precipated when members of the sect and a group of Duncan veterans tangled. Several were injured.

The religious group charged they were set upon by the veterans. The defendants claimed they merely went into the hall to display the American flag and sing the National Anthem when they were attacked by "strong arm" men attending the church meeting.

Duncan firemen halted the fighting with fire hoses.

Given Check For Aid To Cancer Patients In State

The Missouri Chapter of the National Secretaries Association at the annual district meeting of the organization, formally tendered to the Missouri Division of the American Cancer Society a check for $700 as a contribution for direct assistance of cancer patients in the state.

Mrs. Virginia Chapman, chairman of the service committee of the organization of secretaries, in making the presentation as a highlight of the annual dinner held in Springfield this year, pointed out that for three years the organization has taken as a project the assistance of the cancer patient, each year the contribution has increased in size, and that it was the hope of the Missouri unit that other chapters would take similar steps to aid humanity. Said Mrs. Chapman, "We, the Secretaries of Missouri, are indeed happy to present this check as our part in a worthwhile and much needed cause. This amount of seven hundred dollars brings to $1850 the amount contributed to this cause during the past three years."

Robert L. Mack, executive director of the Missouri Division, in accepting and expressing appreciation for the contribution, outlined the program of assistance to the cancer patient in the form of dressings, loan items, and transportation to clinics and points of treatment that are being supported by the cancer society. These aides are handled as economically as possible due to the great amount of time and work contributed by the volunteers of the organization.

Terrapin Carries Date Carved In Its Back In Year 1901

George Weathers, 1318 South Harrison avenue, was out squirrel hunting Saturday morning in the timber on his father's farm when he come across an old, old friend of his childhood. It was a dry land terrapin that had made its home in the timber many years.

It was back in 1901 in the spring of the year that Mr. Weather's father, Howard E. Weathers, who was born and reared on the farm six and a half miles northeast of LaMonte, found the little terrapin under a mulberry tree. It was two or three years old then and he carved his initials and the date on it. From time to time his children would find the little terrapin slowly making its way through the timberland that was its home.

In 1932, one of the sons of the family, Harvey F. Weathers, who resides on a farm north of LaMonte, found the terrapin again and cut his initials and date on him. That was just about the last time the family saw him until Saturday. Now he is big, and maybe he doesn't like to admit it, but he is getting a little old.

George Weathers reached down, picked him up and wrapped him up in his handkerchief. Then he brought him to the Sedalia Democrat-Capital news room. "You would never have believed my story if I hadn't brought him in," he said.

He was going to take him back to the farm, show him to his father and then put him back in his old home in the timber.

The terrapin was happy about going back to the timber. His head came out of his shell, he stretched his neck and legs and looked the news room over—but he drew his head in again to get himself wrapped up in the handkerchief to go back home.

Meyer Pitches Mules To Win Over Bethel

WARRENSBURG, Mo., Nov. 18 —(AP)—Kelly Meyer, Warrensburg quarterback, pitched three touchdown passes to Kenny Webster as the Mules came from behind to beat Bethel college of Newton, Kas., 32 to 7 today.

The teams were tied 7-all at the half after Bethel scored first. Then Warrensburg scored twice each in the third and fourth quarters.

John Rosenstiel scored for Bethel from the one-yard line and Tony Kaufman kicked the extra point to put Bethel ahead in the second period. The Mules tied it up on a 20-yard pass, Dorsey Lightner to Earl Thompson, and John Gieringer's conversion.

In the third period Meyer hit Webster with a 21-yard payoff pass and again on a 50-yard heave with Webster running 30 yards to the goal. Meyer tossed 21 yards to Webster in the fourth quarter and R. J. Schneiders, guard, intercepted a Bethel pass and went 45 yards for the last counter.

Warrensburg, which averaged 403 yards per game in offense while winning seven and dropping two, has accepted an invitation to play Pittsburg State at Pittsburg, Kas., Dec. 2.

Mrs Mary Wild, 97, Had A Happy Birthday a Week Ago

A few days ago a Sedalia man had an occasion to call at a rural home and was met at the door by a charming little old lady who invited him into the house. Seated in the living room of the home she kept up a bright little conversation with him until the member of the family he had called to see came into the room. She stayed there a few minutes longer then smiled sweetly at the Sedalia man and said: "Will you excuse me, please. I must go finish writing my thank-you notes for things I received on my 97th birthday anniversary the other day."

The Sedalia man looked at her in amazement. "Ninety-seventh birthday anniversary," he said. He couldn't believe his ears. She certainly looked and acted far younger than her years.

The little lady is Mrs. Mary Wild, who was 97 years old on Saturday, and is a very good example of the fact that it isn't the years that make you old, its your frame of mind and personality.

Likes To Do Things For Self

Mrs. Wild is still active, she does many things that she has always done, is interested in everything that is going on in the world and does beautiful handwork of various types. When she wants to mail a letter she just walks down the road to the mail box and when she wants to come to town shopping she does that, too. Friday she came in town to have her picture taken.

Last Sunday she really had fun. That was the day that her 97th birthday anniversary was celebrated and all of her family was invited out to the home of Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Clifford, on route 5, where she resides. Mrs. Clifford is her daughter.

There for the day was Mrs. A. B. Wild, Nelson Gerken and daughter, Elfyn, Mr. and Mrs. Olen McClain and son, Eldon, Mr. and Mrs. Leo Clifford and daughter, Darla Jean, Mr. and Mrs. Virgil Williams, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Hodges and sons, Ronnie and Bobbie and Mr. and Mrs. Claude Page and children, Kathy and 'Gene.

There was a big dinner, lots of gifts and lots of cards, so now Mrs. Wild is busy—she has to get all of her thank-you notes written.

Gov. Duff To Figure Strong In G O P Choice

Seems Now To Rate As Key Man In Maneuvering

By Jack Bell

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18—(AP)—Key man in the jockeying during the next 18 months for the Republican presidential nomination may be Gov. James H. Duff of Pennsylvania.

The 67-year-old Pennsylvanian stands in virtually undisputed command today of the second biggest block of votes in the 1952 convention which will nominate a presidential candidate. His election to the Senate completed the rout of the state's so-called "old guard" GOP machine.

To complete a double hold on the state's delegation, Duff's hand-picked candidate, John S. Fine, will step in in January as governor of Pennsylvania.

In 1948, Pennsylvania cast 73 out of the 1,094 convention nominating votes. It was second only to New York with 97 votes.

Despite population switches which will change state representation in the Congress elected in 1952, convention votes that year will follow the present pattern and remain in practically the same ratio as in 1948.

After that, California, which gains seven House seats in the reshuffling, while Pennsylvania loses three and New York two, will be on equal footing with Pennsylvania in voting on the choice of a nominee.

Duff's control over the Pennsylvania bloc of delegates yet to be chosen could only equal that of Gov. Thomas E. Dewey over New York's larger delegation.

There are some differences, however, that put Duff in a more strategic spot.

During his successful campaign for reelection to a third term as governor, Dewey came out for Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower as the 1952 GOP presidential nominee.

Whether or not that move was dictated by a desire to quash charges that he was running for governor only so that he could run for president again, Dewey probably can't get away from the Eisenhower endorsement gracefully.

That keeps Dewey publicly committed to a candidate whose views are open to suspicion on the part of the regular Republicans who run party conventions and nearly always succeed in naming the nominee.

Eisenhower Not Candidate

Eisenhower has said he isn't a candidate. He hasn't even said he is a Republican.

On the other hand, Duff isn't committed to anybody. He probably will hold the Pennsylvania delegation intact as a favorite son candidate and as a possible nominee if he can interest other states in coming his way.

Held together, a bloc of 73 votes could well turn the tide in a split convention. Senator Martin (R.-Pa.) and his friends practically turned the trick for Dewey in 1948 when they swung 40 of the state's votes to the New Yorker on the first ballot.

At that time, Duff held 28 of them for Senator Robert A. Taft of Ohio, Dewey won on the third ballot.

Duff and Taft are going to have 18 months in the Senate together to get better acquainted before the next convention rolls around. Taft's friends frankly hope they can cement a friendship that might give the Ohioan Pennsylvania's big vote.

Taft says he isn't an active candidate. But that doesn't keep his friends from canvassing his chances at the state level. He always has had strong convention support in the past from southern Republican delegations and may have a wider public appeal next time because of his tremendous re-election vote margin in Ohio this year.

Taft is more or less openly against Eisenhower, as he would be against almost any other candidate Dewey would pick, including Dewey himself.

If he can't get the nomination himself, Taft has made it pretty clear that he wouldn't be willing to settle for Gov. Earl Warren of California. But in view of his big-margin victory over James Roosevelt in the California governor's race, Warren is a potential presidential candidate of no mean proportions.

Controlling California's 53 convention votes, Warren probably can enlist the backing of a western bloc to which Arizona, Idaho, Montana, Nevada, Oregon, Utah, Washington and Wyoming could contribute a total of 90 votes if they chose.

It will take around 548 votes to win the nomination, however, and there is doubt that Warren could keep more than California in line for any candidate other than himself.

Warren and Dewey have worked together in past conventions. Taft's friends take it for granted that the two governors will not take the Ohioan if they can get anybody else.

That's where Duff comes in again. If he should side with Taft, who will control the 53 vote Ohio delegation, they could offer formidable opposition to any Warren-Dewey combination.

If Duff should join forces with Dewey and Warren, Taft and his friend would have a difficult time mustering the votes to stop the candidate of such a combine.

With this in mind, Duffy is likely to be a much-sought-out freshman in the new Congress.

America's Children:

The Displaced Generation

In the last decade, a strange new impact has hit the lives of youngsters like the ones at left, uprooted from their home "roots" by a shifting population. Here's the first of five dispatches that tell what is happening to America's children, based on an exclusive preview of the comprehensive reports to be aired at the Mid-century White House Conference on Children and Youth next month.

By DOUGLAS LARSEN
NEA Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON— (NEA) — Today's youngsters are a displaced generation.

No previous crop of U. S. children has ever been forced to adjust to such revolutionary changes in the American way of life as have taken place in the last 10 years.

The magnitude of the problems and their significance is revealed for the first time in one of the most comprehensive series of reports ever made on the status of U. S. Youth. Just completed, and made available through NEA Service exclusively, the reports are the results of more than a year's work by 15,000 doctors, educators, judges and other experts, aided by 85,000 volunteer laymen.

They were prepared in the 48 states and territories for President Truman's Midcentury White House Conference on Chidren and Youth to be held Dec. 3-7. This and succeeding stories in a series are based on an anaysis of the brand new information in the reports.

Here are the most significant changes which have taken place in American life which are having a major effect on the lives and personalities of U. S. youth:

American families have suddenly become mobile, creating a shifting population. The need for a family to plant "roots" appears to be an obsolete idea. Unfortunately for American children, schools, playgrounds and community health services are not mobile at all.

Result: Jammed schools in some places, empty ones elsewhere. And children's personalities aren't as mobile as their bodies.

The tremendous increase in the number of old people in the population, as a result of lengthening the life span of the average person, has put this group in competition with the youth of the country for welfare funds, public assistance benefits and social services. This takes place at a time when most states and communities are being forced to reduce such expenditures below what they were before the war.

The nation's youth has been exposed to a world orgy of anti-racial activity, featuring the inhuman persecution of minority groups.

Result: A bruise on youthful minds which is very slow healing.

At the same time, new attitudes, laws and court decisions have created a revolution in race relations in the past 10 years.

Result: American youth is being asked to try to take a tremendous social leap in this respect, where previous generations have taken only mincing steps.

Mothers have made a mass exodus from the home to take jobs outside. And every day more of them are leaving the kitchen for a place on a payroll.

Result: Millions of kids know the head of the day-care center better than their mothers.

As a result of World War II marriages, millions of youngsters are just beginning to get well-acquainted with their fathers. And hundreds of thousands of other children know their fathers only from intermittent visits to Veterans Administration hospitals.

Much is made of the country's record post-war prosperity. As far as millions of children go it's strictly phony. The family has a new shiny car because that's the only way daddy can get to his job which is 20 miles away.

Result: The family is in debt and when food prices inch up the youngsters get hot dogs four times a week.

In addition to the new major post-war socail and cultural changes which are making life so turbulent and confused for American youth, the chronic social problems which have always been around have been greatly aggravated.

The increase in divorce is breaking up more homes and twisting the lives of millions of innocent children.

The wave of organized crime now gripping the counttry, taking billions of profits from families that can't afford it, is having its bad effect on U. S. children. The general moral laxity which is evident in so many phases of American life is also doing its damage to young minds.

On top of everything else there is the phenomenal war and post-war increase in the country's birth rate. Even without the new problems, the mere addition of so many youngsters to the population would have created a crisis. The increase grossly exaggerates all of the other problems.

Tomorrow: The "roots" have become wheels."

MIDCENTURY REPORT: Melvin A. Glasser (seated), executive director of the Midcentury White House Conference on Children and Youth, sizes up the voluminous reports on which the conference will be based. With him (left to right) are Juanita Luck, youth consultant of the Federal Security Administration; Louis de Boer, director of state and local action for the conference, and Louis Gratz, field consultant.

Lincoln's Gettysburg Address Now A Guide To Hearts and Consciences of Free Men Throughout World;

By Drew Pearson

(Copyright, 1950, By The Bell Syndicate, Inc.)

WASHINGTON.—It will be four score and seven years ago tomorrow, since Abraham Lincoln delivered his famed address dedicating a battlefield at Gettysburg. That address lasted only two minutes, and followed a two-hour speech by orator Edward Everett.

The photographer was still loading his camera when Lincoln sat down, and when he did so there was only perfunctary applause. The Chicago Times described the speech as "flat and dish-watery," while Lincoln himself told his aides that he had been a failure.

However, those 10 sentences now serve as a guide to the hearts and consciences of free men throughout the world. Memorized by almost every school child in America, they have also been translated into French, Spanish, German, Turkish, Portuguese, Danish and Japanese. Thomas Masaryk, first president of Czechoslovakia, once called the Gettysburg address "America's eternal message," and he was right. For it is just as timely today as it was on Nov. 19, 1863.

At that time the nation was involved in a war to free men from physical slavery. Today the country is fighting in Korea to free men from mental slavery. There is a little difference between slavery of the body and slavery of the mind. And, taking our cue from Lincoln, we are still dedicated to the proposition that all men are created free and equal. We are still testing whether a nation, so dedicated, can endure.

How well and how often we have dedicated ourselves to that unfinished work of the men who rest at Gettysburg is symbolized by the tomb of the unknown soldier, and by the white crosses at Normandy and on Iwo Jima. We have not yet reached our goals but we have remained dedicated.

Real Progress

The Civil War was a war against prejudice and oppression. We have come a long way since then. When Lincoln spoke at Gettysburg, only one Negro, Frederick Douglas, an escaped slave and adviser to Lincoln, had won national stature. Today the nation has paid tribute to Ralph Bunche, winner of the Nobel peace prize and a professor at Harvard; to Judge William Hastie, first Negro to sit on the U.S. Court of Appeals; to Congressman William Dawson, first Negro chairman of a congressional committee and a man respected by his southern colleagues; to Walter Gordon, chairman of the California Adult Authority; to Brig. Gen. B. O. Davis, first Negro to attain the rank of general.

When Lincoln spoke at Gettysburg, no Negro was permitted to own property. Today Negroes not only own property, but the Supreme Court has ruled against restrictive covenants. At the time of the Gettysburg address, there was no free education for Negroes, except in missionary schools. But in World War II the number of Negroes with high-school education in the armed forces was 2,305,000, while the courts have ruled that Negroes may be admitted to virtually all universities.

The nation still has a long way to go to lift Negro schools to the level of white schools, but many southern states, including Alabama, Mississippi and North Carolina have made real progress.

Still Long Way to Go

On the other hand, here in the capital of our nation, supposed to be the heart of democracy and freedom, the "menace" of mixed audiences was considered so repugnant that the leading theatre closed its doors rather than admit Negroes; while if Marian Anderson tried to drink a cup of coffee in most restaurants in the nation's capital, she would be asked to leave.

We have come a long way since Lincoln's time, but we still have a long way to go.

When Lincoln dedicated the nation to the "unfinished work" for which men died at Gettysburg, he referred not only to freedom for the Negro race, but to freedom for all men. Though Lincoln belonged to no church, he was deeply religious, and at Gettysburg added two words which were not in his original manuscript: . . . "That this nation, UNDER GOD, shall have a new birth of freedom . . ."

And were he alive today, Lincoln would be saddened at the religious intolerance existing in many parts of the nation.

"Last Full Measure of Devotion"

He would be proud of the great progress we have made in achieving many of his goals. But he would probably ask the question: "Do Americans give their last full measure of devotion only in wartime?" He would be right in asking this question, for while the men who died in the Argonne, at Normandy and on Guadalcanal gave the last full measure of their devotion, what happened to the rest of us? After World War I, the nation devoutly resolved that this war shall not have been in vain, but then quietly lapsed into a period of normalcy and isolation. And by the time World War II rolled around we knew that World War I had won us only a temporary stopgap against oppression.

So in 1941 we marched off to another high-powered war which would have amazed the men who rest at Gettysburg. A war in which hate ruled man and men lost their lives for the cause of individual freedom.

Yes, those men, who died in the Argonne, at Normandy and on Guadalcanal did give their last full measure of devotion. But have the rest of us, during the years between wars, done our utmost? That is the big question Lincoln would ask were he alive today.

Where We Have Failed

When the enemy is at our neighbor's door, we join with him in battle. But during the humdrum, peaceful days between wars, we do not always hold out the helping hand to the same neighbor.

Perhaps that is what Lincoln meant by "the last full measure of devotion." Perhaps that is where we have failed.

We have realized that a world divided against itself, by communism, cannot long endure. But we have done little about the professional haters who defile our tradition that all men are created free and equal.

Nor do we realize that when a nation gets too rich, too fat, too intent on luxury, it falls. The price of privilege is not merely to enjoy its lushness, but to share it with others. To stay on top in this world we have to work at it. And when we start worrying more about war profits than about war taxes, we're in danger.

This country will always rally to defend itself against a foreign enemy. But it's what we do to ourselves and among ourselves between wars that counts.

Government of the people, by the people, and for the people, can exist only as long as people care. If the individual's rights are to be protected, then the individual himself must work at the job of doing right.

Lincoln stated our goals for us plainly enough, but left it to us to figure out how to attain them. And were he living today in this dangerous atomic world, I think he might warn us that unless we learn how to get along with each other as individuals, not only our government, but we, the people, may perish from the earth.

Long Term Draft of Healthiest Youths May Have Grave Effect on Our Future

By Edwin P. Jordan, M. D.

We all know that the state of our health has a tremendous influence on our feeling of well being. As it is individuals who make up a nation it must be equally important that the country as a whole be made up principally of citizens in good health and of sound mind.

At this time when so many of our most physically fit and mentally capable young men are being taken into the armed services it is worth while to give some serious thought to what effect this may have on the future of the nation.

As we understand it, the selective service law was enacted with the aim of putting those into military service who could best serve their country in that way and keeping out of service those who could contribute more in other ways.

It has worked fairly well for the short haul, certainly better in the second than in the first world war. But the situation is different now that it looks like a long pull ahead. The military leaders are charged with the job of winning any battles that may lie ahead and naturally they want the healthiest, most intelligent and aggressive men they can get.

But can we afford to be deprived of this kind of person altogether in civil life? Will the country not suffer in the next generation by being deprived of some of its best blood?

What policy to follow is not easy to decide. The importance of physical handicaps in relation to military service is changing. With mechanized equipment flat feet are no longer as important as once they were; neither are poor teeth or eyesight. But it does seem too bad that the illiterate and mentally deficient are left to sire the next generation while the healtny and intelligent go forth to shed their blood.

What, if anything, can be done about this will be decided by others but we as individuals can perhaps convince ourselves that the good of the country requires a neighbor's son to stay home while another is away fighting.

If such differences are really good for the health of the country they will be accepted. But everyone will want to be sure that the decision is made with the best interests of the nation in mind and not at the whim of some local prejudice.

Christmas Cheerio!

Austerity-dieting Britons received good news the other day in an announcement from Food Minister Maurice Webb that a special Christmas week allowance of rationed foods will be granted. Six more ounces of candy, four additional ounces of cooking fat and a whole pound and a half of sugar will be added to the lean English larder. The present low reserve supply will not permit the expected addition to the skimpy meat ration, much to the housewives' dismay.

We here in America might well take note of this. Instead of complaining about the high cost of the turkey and dressings that will decorate the table next Thursday we should humbly include in our thanksgiving our fervent thanks that we are able to sit down to such a meal, with only the price to worry about.

Mark 4:1—20; John 1:12; Cor. 1:30

THE FIRST STEP: RECEPTIVITY

We continue our study of the Beatitudes—the study of "the happy ones." Jesus gives His recipe for happiness, and it begins with "renunciation." This reverses the ordinary recipe for happiness, which usually begins with "assert," "take," "realize." Which recipe for happiness will life back?

Now not that the first three beatitudes are all receptive instead of assertive: (1) the renounced in spirit (vs. 3); (2) those that mourn over the mistakes, sins, and failures of themselves and others, and mourn for the coming of the Kingdom (vs. 4); (3) the meek, or the disciplined (vs. 5). All three bespeak one thing: receptivity. These are all passive virtues. Then follow three positive or active virtues: (1) the merciful (vs. 7); (2) the pure in heart (vs. 8); (3) the peace-makers (vs. 9). Between these two sets of three, passive and positive virtues, there is one (vs. 6) that is both passive and positive: 'Blessed are they which do hunger and thirst after righteousness"—that is active—"for they shall be filled"—passive. This verse, made up of both, is the pivot upon which the change is made from passive to active virtues.

Now note that the Kingdom way of life begins with receptivity. Is that right? Isn't that where all life has to begin? The two cells the ovum and the sperm have to receive each other before they can begin the positive business of producing active life. The seed in the ground receives moisture and nutrition from the earth and the air before it can begin to give forth in flower and fruit. An organism can expend as much as it takes in, and no more. If it doesn't begin with receptivity, it doesn't begin. The scientist who doesn't sit down before the facts as a little child, and isn't prepared to give up every preconceived notion, and isn't willing to follow to whatever end nature will lead him, will know nothing. He has to be renounced, to mourn that he doesn't know, to be humble, or he gets nowhere. The first immutable law of all life, material and spiritual, is: receptivity. Life confronts us with the alternatives: receive or perish.

O God, I dare not perish, when I can receive. And now, renounced and receptive, I come to Thee. Take my emptiness and make it into Thy fullness; my foolishness and make it into Thy wisdom; my paralysis and make it into Thy power; myself and make it into Thee. For I hunger and thirst after Thee. I really do. Amen.

Q. and A.

You and the Service

By DOUGLAS LARSEN
NEA Staff Correspondent

By DOUGLAS LARSEN
NEA Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON — (NEA) —

Q. I have been expecting a call to active duty any day. But I have also made plans to get married. Suppose I get the call during the month I am on my honeymoon and can't show up for duty, what will be the result?

A. Those orders are sent as registered mail. They will know that you didn't receive your orders and try to forward them to you.

Q. My son is 19 and has just joined the Navy. He has a withered hand and three bad fingers. Why did they take him like this? And can he get out?

A. The Navy certainly knew what it was doing when they accepted your son. Obviously his hand was not bad enough to keep him from service. So it's just as obvious that they won't release him because of his hand, unless it gets much worse.

Q. I have two sons in the service .They both send money home to help me support myself and the other two children I have with me. Can I get the new allotment from both of them?

No. The best you can do is get an allotment from one and all that the other one will send you out of his pay.

Q. I have been in the National Guard for two years. Since joining I have gotten high blood pressure from nervousness. If they won't take me in the Army when my guard outfit is called, might I still be drafted?

A. It's possible. As stated in this space many times, it's up to the doctor to examine each potential draftee and determine whether or not he meets the physical standards for the Army. Because one Army doctor turned you down, it doesn't mean the next one will, as illogical as that might sound.

Q. I am in the reserves, but have a wife and three kids. Will they take me? I understand they aren't taking men with four dependents.

A. They won't take you.

Q. I have claimed my mother as a dependent on my draft questionnaire. But someone told me I would get into trouble for that because she receives $42 from the government because my father was wounded in World War II. Am I in trouble for what I did?

A. No. The general rule is that a person is considered a dependent if you contribute to more than one-half of his or her support.

Q. I understand that the payments on our house will be made smaller because of my husband being in the service. When he gts out will he have to pay the difference or start up where he left off?

A. All sorts of fair arrangements can be worked out. There is no set rule.

Q. Our only son is 19 and will soon be drafted. Is there any way to kee phim out of combat?

A. Not if he is physically qualified for a combat assignment.

Large Variety of Viruses Causing Colds Makes it Difficult to Develop Any Resistance to Them
By Edwin P. Jordan, M. D.
Written for NEA Service

All of today's questions deal with the problems involving the breathing apparatus.

Q—Every winter my 7-year-old girl gets one cold after another and by spring is very much run down. Also she misses a lot of school and I am afraid she will fall behind. Is there anything which can be done about this?—F. S. A.

A—This kind of thing is all too common. Colds are caused by viruses but unfortunately there are several different kinds, so that one cold does not build any lasting resistance to another. Also there is no vaccine which has yet been found of practical use in preventing colds. In very severe cases of this sort, one has to consider moving to a milder climate. There is also definite nope in the fact that many youngsters who have frequent colds seem to outgrow their difficulty in a few years.

Q—My 9-year-old daughter has a bronchial condition all winter, but even in the warm weather she continues to cough. Allergy tests show that she is sensitive to pecans and tea, neither of which she has ever had in her life, and to June grass. What do you think about this?—Mrs. E. B.

A—Your daughter is faced with a complicated problem. Quite likely the bronchitis which she had during the winter was caused by infection with germs although it is also possible that it was an allergic condition due to sensitiveness to molds or something of the sort. The fact that the trouble continued in warm weather indicates either rather severe damage to the bronchial tubes, or continued sensitiveness to something in the air or food. All these questions will have to be carefully studied by the physician.

Q—Last spring I had virus pneumonia and now months later I still feel weak and tired. Is this normal and can I expect to get over it?—T. R. B.

A—Virus or a typical pneumonia usually leaves people very much weakened for a long time. Besides the physical weakness they are often much depressed and discouraged. Even at best this lasts for weeks after the acute illness is over. If your lungs are clear, you can expect eventually to feel normal again.

Q—My mother who is 67 has had three attacks of lobar pneumonia in the last two years. She was treated with penicillin each time, but I am worried about her getting it again. What do you think?—Mrs. C. L.

A—Your mother is evidently one of those people who has become sensitive to the pneumococcus which is the germ causing lobar pneumonia. It would be wise to consider moving her to a mild climate where she is less likely to come in contact with this germ. If this is not possible, then she should take every precaution to avoid exposure to people with bad colds or other infections of the breathing passages.

Q—Why can't anything be done for the flu? Last winter our whole family had it, and I would think that by now the medical profession should have some answers. —R. L. P.

A—I don't blame you for being discouraged. Research workers have already done a lot on influenza and know much more about it than 20 years ago. Nevertheless this has proved to be a very complicated disease and so far there is no good way of preventing it. A vaccine may come, however, and it is possible that one of the antibiotics will prove useful. Hardly anyone dies of the flu, except during the great epidemics and even then much of the trouble comes from getting ou tof bed too early and catching pneumonia.

• Q's and A's

Q—Who was Italy's last King?

A—Umberto II, who succeeded to the throne upon the abdication of his father, King Victor Emmanuel III, on May 9, 1946. Umberto remained in power only a few weeks.

* * *

Q—In membership, how does the British House of Commons compare with the U. S. House of Representatives?

A—The House of Commons has 640 members compared with 435 in the House of Representatives.

* * *

Q—From what work is the quotation "absence makes the heart grow fonder"?

A—It is from the "Isle of Beauty" by Thomas Haynes Bayly.

* * *

Q—Is the hickory tree found in Europe?

A—Geological records show that the hickories originally extended into Greenland, and were found in Europe. Today no native species occur there.

HE CAME TO KILL

by ADELINE McELFRESH

XXX

THEY found Peter in the luggage compartment of his brother's new red convertible. Rigor mortis had long since done its work. His handsome face was distorted, his body horribly twisted. Leeana turned away, sickened by the horrifying spectacle of a dead man whose body curved like the giant claw of Death itself.

Jasper was not in sight. Had he gone to his wife, to confront her with her crimes? "Mart!" Leeana babbled out her fear.

Mart leaped toward the house, the others following.

Jasper was hammering on the door of Sondra's room. The guard was trying to dislodge the key in the lock on the inside. Mrs. Carstairs, who was supposed to stay with Sondra under all circumstances, stood by, protected by the ruffled feathers of anger.

"She felt faint," she flung at Sheriff Purdy as he halted, puffing, at the door. "Wanted camphor."

"Mrs. Carstairs no more'n came out till Mrs. Thorne locked the door," the guard explained. "She's awful still." He slammed his brawny shoulder against the door. It creaked, but held. Mart added his weight and together they lunged. The door groaned on its hinges and gave way, spilling them into an empty room.

Sheriff Purdy sprang to the window, yanked up an unwieldy sheet-and-blanket rope and flung it at his feet. The roar of a racing car was his answer.

Purdy bellowed his frustration as he pounded into the hall and downstairs to telephone the alarm to state and local police. Leeana, Mart at her side, leaned far out the window to watch the red car streak toward the highway. She held her breath.

She was not conscious of crying out as the car struck its speeding red nose around the hairpin curve—and dived down the precipitous hillside down which she—Leeana—had fled from Peter.

Hours later, when the terrible shrieks of tortured metal no longer rang in her ears and the picture of Sondra's lifeless, broken body being lifted from the wreck and placed in the same ambulance with the man she had murdered had dimmed somewhat, Leeana left her room. Perhaps now she could trust herself to speak to Jasper, to comfort him—if there was comfort for a man who has seen his wife wipe out almost the entire Thorne clan.

Jasper had gone into Thorne City. So had Mart and the sheriff. Only Mrs. Carstairs and old Arthur Jones were in the kitchen at Thorne Hill.

"Sit down, child," Mrs. Carstairs invited.

* * *

LEEANA shook her head but sank gratefully into a chair and accepted the coffee the woman poured for her. It was strong, soothing to jangled raw nerves. Gulping it, she thought, We'll be going away soon—Mart and I. But we'll come back—Mart and Pops and I. We're Thornes . . . well, not Mart, but . . .

She was thinking like Miss Maggie. A Thorne's place is at Thorne Hill. How often Pops had said that—and longed for "home"!

"That nice Mr. Preston said tell you he'd be right back," Mrs. Carstairs said, smiling. "With a surprise."

Leeana shook her head. "I'm beyond surprise, Carsty. And shock. We all are, I think."

"Tut-tut," Arthur Jones clucked. "Not this s'prise, Miss Leeanie. I'm all excited my own self. Why, when he called out from town—"

"Arthur!" reprimanded Mrs. Carstairs.

The old man bobbed his head, grinned toothlessly at them. "That young man of yours has a head on his shoulders all right, Miss Leeanie."

Leeana felt a wild urge to laugh, to be gay. Mart was her "young man." Old Arthur said so.

Then she heard Mart calling as he came in the door.

"Leeana? Hey—honey!"

Jumping up, Leeana ran into the hall. Mart swept her into his arms, kissed her soundly and then held her away from him.

"Something in the car for you," he said, too casually.

Leeana saw the twinkle in his eyes burst into a shower of infectious gaiety. She ran to the door.

"Pops!" she shrieked when it opened in her face and the tall, graying man stepped inside. "Oh, Pops!"

* * *

ROGER THORNE'S arms were strong, like Mart's, and his shoulder was broad enough for the weeping that had been shuttered within her for so long. Leeana took full advantage of it.

"It's been bad, hasn't it? I came as fast as I could. But," and Roger Thorne looked from his daughter to Mart, "you seem to have done all right, honey. The law was on your side."

"From the first," Mart vowed.

Chuckling, Roger Thorne added, "'Course I'd have come anyhow. A father sort of likes to give his daughter to the man who will be his son."

"Thanks, sir." Mart gripped his outstretched hand. "Thanks—Pops."

Jasper came then and they talked of murder, of the wedding, of going away—of new happiness that would come, one day, to Thorne Hill.

"Sondra wanted too much," Jasper said. "Far too much. So did Peter. Me?" The husky softness faded, his voice became hard, proud. "I was slow, satisfied—dumb—but I'm still alive."

Yes, Leeana thought. Alive—and free. Free for the first time. But no, Jasper was not free. . . . He was too much a Thorne to forget it. . . . She looked at her father, and at Mart, and felt warm with happiness. She was the lucky one.

Moscow Squeezes Tito From All Sides, Hopes For Early Collapse of His Rule

By LEON DENNEN
NEA Staff Correspondent

BELGRADE — (NEA) — Russia, well aware of Yugoslavia's worsening economic plight, is putting on the heat both internally and externally in the hope of forcing the early collapse of Tito's rebellious regime.

The belief among western observers here is that only Moscow-inspired Cominform Communists would be ready and able to move into the vacuum which would be created by Tito's fall.

External pressures are building up on Yugoslavia's borders. It is reported the Russians have at least 10 well-equipped divisions in the Danubian area. And within recent weeks they have been quietly strengthening the armies of the Red satellite countries which encompass Yugoslavia.

Led by Soviet officers, these forces are said to be well fitted out with tanks, guns and other modern heavy arms supplied by Russia.

* * *

For the present, Yugoslavia's army of 500,000 men is still rated superior to the combined forces of satellite Hungary, Rumania, Bulgaria and Albania. But Tito's men lack modern and heavy weapons; they're equipped mostly for guerilla and mountain fighting. By next spring, it is felt they'll be inferior to the combined satellites.

Moscow is, of course, alert to the likelihood that an armed attack on Yugoslavia would embroil Russia in another world war. Experts here think she isn't ready for that yet. But they fear the changed balance of military strength foreseen for next spring may encourage the Kremlin to act then or soon afterward.

Meanwhile, the Soviet Union is striving feverishly to overturn Tito internally. The Cominform has stepped up its campaign of terror and its war of nerves against the Red rebels.

* * *

This has been especially true since the North Korean reverses at the hands of United Nations forces. Observers in Belgrade feel Russia is concerned above all with regaining prestige behind the Iron Curtain. Communist defeats in Korea apparently caused widespread rejoicing among satellite countries. There has even been evidence of some restlessness there.

Tito, the living proof that a Communist state can exist without subservience to Russia, therefore remains target No. 1 for Stalin.

Recently the Cominform's official journal forecast that "the day is not far off" when pro-Moscow underground forces will revolt against the Tito government. In daily broadcasts, Hungary, Rumania and Bulgaria call for "death to the Fascist, Tito."

Artificially provoked and carefully executed border incidents and armed skirmishes have transformed Yugoslavia's frontiers into an explosive no-man's land.

* * *

Spies and saboteurs specially trained in Cominform schools are streaming across the borders. The Yugoslav police capture many, but a lot manage to filter in to carry out acts of sabotage and destruction.

For a long time Tito refused to acknowledge publicly that he and his ex-masters in the Kremlin were no longer friends. But in his speech at Zagreb he openly admitted for the first time that his people are actually engaged right now in a "small war" with Russia's satellites. He spoke of the "train of human casualties" brought by the continuous series of border provocations.

Determined now to seek food and favor in the West, Tito has at last begun to relax somewhat his iron grip on his own people. His is still a ruthless dictatorship, a totalitarian police state, but as one Yugoslav writer put it to me, "it is a dictatorship with a guilty conscience." There have been fewer night arrests lately, and the secret police terror has lessened a bit.

But if Tito is really to be saved, it is American aid that must do it. Foodstuffs now, to stave off economic disaster. And perhaps arms tomorrow, to keep his anti-Russian army in being as a powerful and effective force blocking Moscow's path.

SUPERIOR NOW, BUT FOR HOW LONG? Tito's army of 500,000 is rated now as better than the combined foes along Yugoslavia's borders. But equipment, like the rifles these soldiers are cleaning, is mostly for guerrilla and mountain warfare.

Hotels Lose on Towel-Takers

NEW YORK—(AP)—Taking towels from hotels may be a joke to the taker but not to the hostelry owner. No matter what you pay for the room, if you take a towel, the hotel loses money on the transaction, report owners. Most hotels pay $2.50 per towel.

The Hotel Edison here recently took an informal survey to discover if towel-taking was predominant among residents of any section of the U. S. Owner Irwin Kramer reports that it can't be traced to any one part, but that "people from all over do it mostly for a gag. These same people wouldn't ever dream of sticking their hand in my pocket when I wasn't looking and taking out $2.50," he moans.

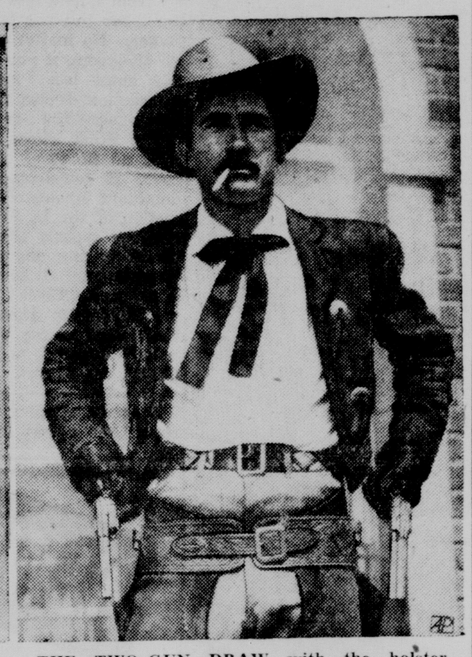
Here's a Wild West Drawing Lesson

AP Newsfeatures

Small fry cowboys will get a big surprise to know there is more than one way to make that lightning draw. The fastest methods of drawing a gun, right from the pages of western history, are posed here by members of the cast of Edward Small's Columbia film, "Texas Rangers." These are among the draws preferred by famous rangers and notorious badmen. Try them, Junior!

TWO-GUN MEN liked the cross hand reverse, so George Montgomery shows how it was used by Dave Rudabaugh, vicious killer, because he thought this was the swiftest draw.



THE TWO-GUN DRAW with the holster straight on was the best liked by badman Duke Fisher. Here Jack O'Mahoney in the film "Texas Rangers," shows how Duke did it.

Cross Hand Reverse was the pet draw of Sam Bass, outlaw, played by Bill Bishop. Either hand.

Straight On from the side was most common. George Montgomery shows how Ben Thompson, outlaw, did it.

STAR TRIO OF "COPPER CANYON"

Ray Millard, Hedy Lamarr and MacDonald Carey star in the lusty, spectacular western adventure, "Copper Canyon," in color by technicolor, starting today at the Fox theatre. Mona Freeman and Harry Carey, Jr., are featured in the cast.

Margaret Sullavan Loves Role in 'No Sad Songs'

Margaret Sullavan doesn't pretend to be a trail-blazer, but she does prefer the unusual. Rather than play a "namby-pamby heroine," Miss Sullavan quit Hollywood for the Broadway and London stage six years ago, when she was at the peak of her film fame.

Columbia Pictures' "No Sad Songs For Me," the gallant love story at the Uptown Theatre, was unusual enough to lure Miss Sullavan back to the screen. In "No Sad Songs For Me," the star is seen as a charming wife and mother who learns she is suffering from an incurable disease. With ten months to live, she hides her tears behind a smile while she smooths the way for another woman to take her place. An adult theme, with mature characters in a pertinent modern problem, "No Sad Songs For Me" also stars Wendell Corey and Viveca Lindfors.

Miss Sullavan explains her departure from Hollywood and her return, with casual simplicity. "I was completely happy doing stage plays, like 'The Voice of the Turtle.' When a dimensional, dramatic film role came along, I was willing to face the cameras."

In addition to the stars, "No Sad Songs For Me" includes in its cast Natalie Wood, John McIntire, Ann Doran and Richard Quine. Howard Koch penned the screen play from the novel by Ruth Southard. Rudolph Mate directed and Buddy Adler produced "No Sad Songs For Me."

Co-hit on the program is the howlarious musical funfest, "There's a Girl in My Heart"—This program plays today thru Tuesday at the Uptown Theatre.

Russia and her satellites lag far behind in the world's production of vital oil. With 71.8 per cent of the world's oil concentrated in the Western Hemisphere, the area of next most strategic importance is the Middle East, producing 17.5 per cent. "Adequate protection of this area now may well slow down or stop the Russian time table for aggression," is the conclusion of a study by Chicago oil expert Gustav Egloff, presented at the annual meeting of the American Petroleum Institute in Los Angeles, Calif. The Newsmap above, based on data from Egloff's report to the Institute, gives daily world crude oil production for July, 1950. Circle inset shows total for each major area and its percentage of the world total.

Funny Business By Hershberger

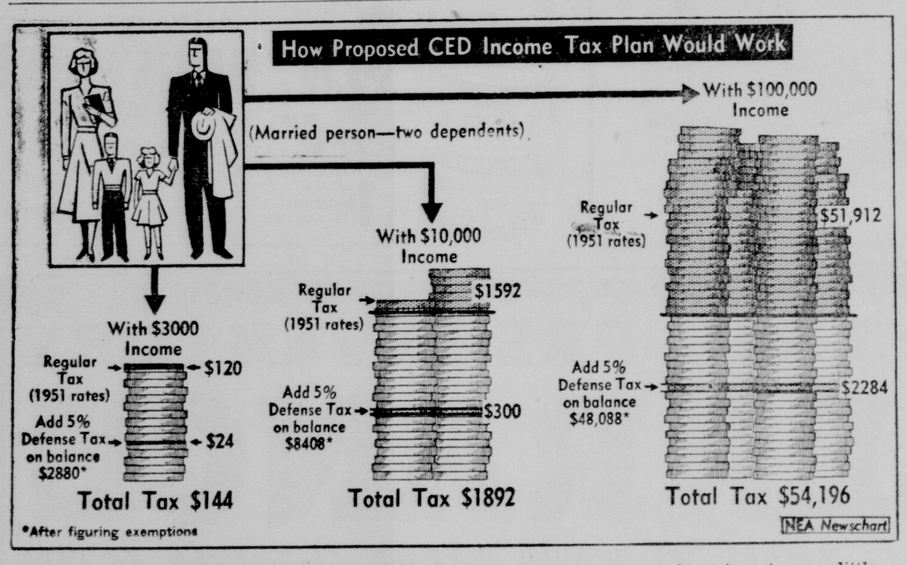
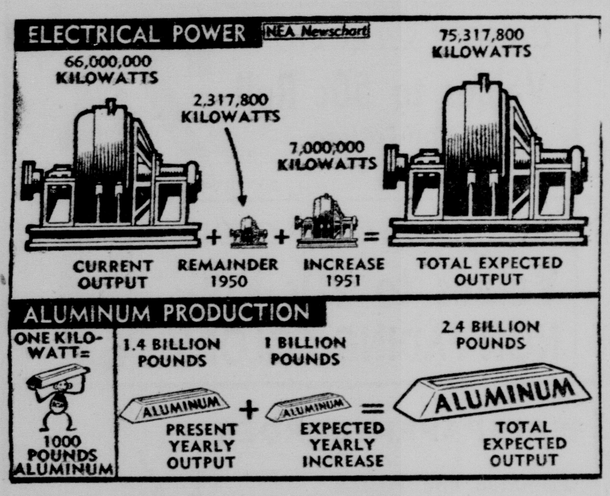
"Don't get excited—they're empty packages! I just want to keep in practice for after the holidays!"



NEXT YEAR: INCOME TAX PLUS DEFENSE TAX—We're all going to have to ante up a little more to pay for the Korean war, European defense and the upbuilding of our armed forces. More income tax is one answer. The Committee on Economic Development has recommended a temporary extra five per cent tax on top of the one you pay now. The Newschart shows how it would affect taxpayers in various income tax brackets. You figure your income tax as usual. Then you take what you have left and do it all over again. Subtract the same deductions to give you a new net taxable income. Five per cent of that sum is the extra "defense tax" you'll pay if the CED plan goes through.



MORE ALUMINUM FOR REARMAMENT—Newschart above shows how power companies intend to feed the great aluminum industry expansion being planned by Uncle Sam. Over nine million more kilowatts generating capacity will be needed to handle the growth program as well as similar ones in other industries. Civilian consumers of aluminum will not benefit, however. The National Production Authority has just ordered a 35 per cent cutback on aluminum for civilian use, effective Jan. 1.
